

HEARING ON CLAIM
OF INVENTOR HOWE
FOR $10,000,000

Counsel, at Opening, Indicates Amount Sought Under Judgment Against Commonwealth Steel.

CONTENDS PROCESS
BUILT UP COMPANY

Says It Was Virtually Insolvent, Later Sold for $35,000,000 — Defense Counter Statements.

Counsel for Andrew F. Howe, University City inventor, indicated today, at the beginning of a hearing to determine how much Howe is to get for use of his inventions by the old Commonwealth Steel Co., that the amount sought would be $10,000,000.

The hearing is being conducted at the Federal Building before Edward T. Allen, Quincy (Ill.) attorney, as special master in chancery appointed by the United States District Court at Springfield, Ill. This court authorized the judgment in 1930, but left the amount to be determined by this proceeding.

Joseph T. Davis, attorney for Howe, told the Special Master in an opening statement that steel made by the Howe molding form method accounted for $91,000,000 of the gross sales of the Commonwealth company from 1911 through 1928, which totaled $123,000,000.

Davis contended also that use of the invention was largely responsible for the fact that the company, which he described as virtually insolvent prior to the invention, was worth $35,000,000 when it was sold to the General Steel Castings Corporation in 1929.

Company's Contentions. Attorneys for the company told a Federal judge that the "high cost" of gathering and distributing news and the lessened demand for its service "made it impossible for the bureau" to maintain its present high standards of service at prevailing rates.

Between 40 and 50 employees, it was said, are affected.

NURSE CONFESSES
KILLING, RECANTS

Admits Assuming Blame for Shooting of German Police Sergeant on Patriotic Impulse.

PRAGUE, June 12 (AP).—Tiny, secret radio transmitters regulated by time devices and working without human attendance today worried German police seeking the killers of a German police sergeant.

Broadcasting speeches from phonograph records, the hidden transmitters were calling on the Czech population to preserve a solid front.

German officials disclosed meanwhile that they had placed charges of "misleading authorities" against Anna Kopecka, a young Czech nurse who had surrendered to police and told them she had killed the sergeant, Wilhelm Kniest, in Kladno last Thursday.

The officials said she was an impostor who had acted on patriotic impulses. She finally declared she took responsibility for the shooting "because I wanted to relieve the sufferings of the Czech people of Kladno."

Police were tuning in on the broadcasts but had little success in stamping out this form of agitation. Reports to authorities were that the sending sets were easily transportable and were moved from place to place. A clockwork record turning at any desired time.

Use of the little transmitters was one form of "passive resistance" with which Bohemians are opposing German control. Authorities, while admitting the sending sets are in "irritating" element, said their influence was not great.

Investigation of the killing of Kniest proceeded in great secrecy. Kladno police merely said "progress is being made."

Some excitement was caused by several shots fired in the air by police in Kladno last night to remind some citizens to obey punitive orders imposed for the killing and close their windows at 8 p. m.

The protectorate government at last threatened severe measures against the killer, but later decided against them. Czech sources said that investigation apparently had reached the stage where the name of one of the alleged killers was known to German police.

German and Czech police conducted a country-wide search and all gendarmes and frontier posts received instructions to watch for the suspected person. A post mortem examination showed that Kniest was killed by three shots from two different weapons.

Tighter Control Discussed. Reports meanwhile were current that a reorganization of Germany's Bohemia-Moravia protectorate was being considered.

$79,500 WATTEAU
PAINTING STOLEN
FROM THE LOUVRE

Portrait "L'Indifferent" Taken With Frame During Sunday Rush of Visitors.

PARIS, June 12 (AP).—A masterpiece of French painting, "L'Indifferent" by Antoine Watteau, was stolen from the Louvre Museum yesterday during the Sunday rush of visitors.

The portrait, 10 by 8 inches, was taken with its frame from a museum gallery. A word-wide alarm was given by French police.

The Louvre once before was the victim of a sensational art robbery. Leonardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" was stolen Aug. 21, 1911, and recovered in December, 1913, in Florence.

"L'Indifferent" is the portrait of a young man in the elegant cape, cocked hat, lace-edged jacket, tight-fitting pants and silk stockings of a seventeenth century dandy. Art authorities estimated its value at from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 francs ($79,500 to $104,000).

KILLS SELF BEFORE A CROWD
AS POLICE TRY TO STOP HIM

Philadelphia Fires While Churchgoers, Attracted by Cries and Sirens, Look On.

PHILADELPHIA, June 12 (AP).—Frank E. Ennis, a 51-year-old widower, asked his housekeeper, "Did you ever see a man die?" and killed himself while she looked on. His 9-year-old daughter and several hundred churchgoers watched, and three policemen tried to stop him.

Ennis, returned home from an automobile ride and told his daughter, Jane: "I am going away forever. I'm not coming back." Then he called his housekeeper, Miss Ellie McKay, 23. He had discharged her Saturday but permitted her to stay overnight. She told him she would be married soon.

"I'll give you something to remember me by when you go," Ennis shouted. Then he shot himself with a pistol. His daughter and housekeeper ran to a corner drug store and called police.

With a slight head wound, Ennis ran to a neighbor's house. When police arrived he flourished the pistol. A crowd of churchgoers was attracted by the police sirens and Miss McKay's screams.

A policeman clambered over a porch rail to seize the pistol. Another tried to reason with Ennis. A third sought to divert his attention, but he pressed the muzzle to his temple and fired.

20 PCT. SALES TAX IN MADRID,
SUBSIDY FOR FRANCO'S MEN

Levy, Previously Imposed Elsewhere, Goes Into Effect Thursday on Retail Purchases.

MADRID, June 12 (AP).—Madrid citizens, facing the highest living costs of any city in Europe, will pay a new tax of 20 per cent on all purchases at cafes, bars and similar establishments, beginning next Thursday, to help pay Generalissimo Franco's soldiers and their families.

The tax has been in effect since the civil war began in 1936 in areas of Spain previously conquered by the nationalists but will be applied this week to Madrid for the first time. It was made effective June 1 in Valencia.

Proprietors of affected establishments must give tickets to every consumer showing the charge of 20 per cent for the subsidy for combatants.

Most laborers here are earning the equivalent of 50 cents a day. Food consumption still is restricted in the areas early won over by Franco and supplies are being sent to Madrid.

The entire nation still is on a partial food-rationing basis.

Says at West Point There Have Been Dramatic Illustrations of Fate of Un-defended Nations.

MOBILITY BIG NEED
IN NATION'S DEFENSE

Declares Recent Conflicts Show That Individual Soldier Remains the Controlling Factor.

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 12 (AP).—The fledgling officers who will direct the future might of America's armies heard President Roosevelt assert today that, while King George's visit had emphasized that nations without fear could be friendly, this country's "desire for peace must never be mistaken for weakness."

During recent months, Mr. Roosevelt told the graduating class at the United States Military Academy, international political considerations have required still greater emphasis upon the vitalization of our defense, for we have had dramatic illustrations of the fate of undefended nations.

Not by name did he mention Austria, Czechoslovakia or Memel, the states absorbed in whole or in part by the German Reich, nor did he speak of international concern over those assimilations.

And he referred to the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to the United States as "a courteous recognition of the cordiality and good will which prevails between two great nations." He added:

"Its significance lay in the fact that friendship could exist between the two countries since both were free to choose their own path. Strength comes, not from arms alone but from restraint, understanding and co-operation which in turn are the product of trained and disciplined minds."

Although Mr. Roosevelt declared that "we seek peace by honorable and pacific conduct of our international affairs," he laid stress anew on America's intention to build up her armed forces.

"The machine gun has laid its iron grip upon the world's armies; and technical developments have demanded the modernization of our military establishments, a program which has been prosecuted vigorously during the past six years," he said.

Standing on a flag-draped platform in West Point's spacious stone armory, looking down into the faces of members of the graduating class, to whom he presented the diploma a few minutes later, the chief executive declared the coming of the machine did not mean "that we shall ever have a robot war from which the primary human elements, courage, heroism, intelligence and morale, will have departed."

"So far from submerging men," he said, "the modern developments emphasize their responsibilities. Recent conflicts in Europe, the Far East and Africa bear witness to the fact that the individual soldier remains the controlling factor."

Greatest Mobility Needed. The object of developing aviation, motorization and mechanization, the President asserted, is to attain the highest possible degree of mobility. He explained that mobility of armaments was essential to the United States because even if fixed defensive installations at vital, strategic centers were desirable, vast territorial expanses of America would make their maintenance economically impracticable.

Mr. Roosevelt greeted his audience as "colleagues in the service of the United States."

"You will find, as I have," he said, "that the service never ends in the sense that it engages the best of your ability and the best of your imagination in the endless adventure of keeping the United States safe, strong and at peace."

"You will find that the technique you acquired can be used in many ways, for the army of the United States has a record of achievement in your imagination in the endless adventure of keeping the United States safe, strong and at peace."

CASEY LOSES ANOTHER
ATTACK ON POLICE BILL

State Senate Votes Down One More Amendment; His Support dwindles to 8.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 12 (AP).—The Senate opened its fourth day of debate on the Kansas City police bill late today with Senator M. E. Casey of Kansas City, offering four more amendments in his efforts to defeat the measure.

The first, which would have required policemen to be personally property-taxpaying citizens of Kansas City for three years preceding appointment, was voted down 22 to 8 on a roll call.

This was the nineteenth amendment—most of them offered by Casey—to be voted down since the Senate began last Wednesday its discussion of the proposal to place Kansas City's police under State supervision.

The bill requires only two years' residence, with no mention of tax paying, as a qualification for policemen.

Tardily arriving Senators brought attendance to 30 of the Senate's 34 members before the vote was taken.

Senator Jess D. Sexton (Dem.), Lawson, who had supported most of the other amendments, voted with the administration forces and Senators Delmar Dail (Dem.), Marcelline, who likewise had supported Casey's forces, was absent.

But even with his meager following dwindling from an opening 13 to 15 votes down to a mere eight, Casey apparently has no intention of yielding in his relentless attack upon the measure demanded by the Pendergast organization's political opponent, Gov. Lloyd C. Stark.

Royal Pair Estimated to Have Been Seen by 10,000,000 So Far—Invitation to Roosevelt Rumored, Officially Denied ABOARD THE ROYAL PILOT TRAIN, June 12 (AP).—Relaxed after a quiet visit at Hyde Park, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth returned today to their dominion of Canada, whence they will sail for England Thursday night.

The British rulers, who in three weeks in Canada and four days in the United States were seen by probably 5,000,000 persons in each country, came toward the end of their journey still smiling.

Crossing the international boundary early today at Rouses Point, N. Y., the train headed for "The Maritimes," as the eastern seaboard provinces of Canada are known to their residents.

After a stop of almost two hours at Delson Junction, Que., the royal train left at 8:05 a. m. (St. Louis time), with King George standing on the rear platform and waving to wildly cheering crowd of about 500 persons.

At St. John's, 30,000 people gave the King and Queen a tumultuous welcome on their arrival at 8:30 a. m. A scheduled eight-minute service stop was lengthened to 20 because the royal pair wanted to see Canadian and United States veterans lined along the right of way.

100,000 at Sherbrooke. Farmers gathering from miles around tripled the population of Sherbrooke to give a rousing welcome to the British rulers on their third stop in Canada today. They paused for 49 minutes.

More than 100,000 persons crowded into the bustling textile city, including visitors from New England.

Spectators paid $3 each for seats in the railway station which accommodated nearly 6,000 persons.

Signs and placards were in French and English. This city is in the heart of one of French Canada's richest agricultural districts.

A huge arch over the road from the station said "Welcome" and its French equivalent "Bienvenue."

Storm Damages Decorations. Clouds banked the sky along the royal progress into French Canada, aftermath of a storm last night that cut a wide swath across Quebec province, causing heavy damage to decorations hung in honor of the royal visit.

The King and Queen will sail from Halifax, arriving in London June 22 to complete a mission already under discussion throughout the world as to its effect as a unifying influence in the British Empire and because of implications and possibilities concerning British-American relations.

Already there have been reports that the King issued a "pressing" invitation to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt to visit England, but American and British officials said this was without foundation.

In appreciation of American hospitality, King George undoubtedly expressed the desire to entertain the President, but as one member of the King's suite said in discussing the matter, "We know what happened to the last American President who visited Europe."

Restful Day at Hyde Park. The royal pair were more at ease and apparently enjoyed themselves more thoroughly during the inand to Nation as Well.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., June 12 (AP)—The King and Queen of England, having sampled American ways for four days including a presidential picnic featuring "hot dogs," started back to Canada last night on their return home.

The blue and silver royal train pulled out of the Hyde Park station at 9:09 p. m. (St. Louis Time) after their majesties had formal night and day at President Roosevelt's Hyde Park estate.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt, and the President's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, took their royal guests down to the plain, red brick station and waved them on their way, just as ordinary hosts do for ordinary week-end guests.

Informally, which had characterized the royal pair's stay at the Roosevelt estate, the King and Queen, who were in the plain, red brick station and waved them on their way, just as ordinary hosts do for ordinary week-end guests.

The last event at Hyde Park House was a small dinner party. Afterward the President and his family, the royal guests and some members of their suite chatted until it was time to go to the station.

King Presents Gold Inkwell. Before departing, King George gave the President a gold inkwell as a token of appreciation, not only to the Chief Executive, but also to the nation he represents, for four momentous days in which the King and Queen were taken into the hearts of America.

From President and Mrs. Roosevelt on down the more important members of the White House staff received autographed pictures of the King and Queen.

In the library of the Roosevelt home, the King stepped up to the President and with a smile and a few brief words, handed him a box containing the photograph in a silver frame.

The Queen presented a similar photograph to Mrs. Roosevelt, and there was one, too, for the President's mother.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt likewise gave pictures of themselves to their Majesties.

The King and Queen boarded the train wearing the attire in which they were to dine. The King wore a dinner jacket, and the Queen a dress with a white fur piece at the neck. Before mounting the steps of the special train, they shook hands smilingly with New York State troopers who had helped insure the safety of their visit here.

As the train rolled down the track the crowd received a final wave and smile from royalty.

Crowd Sings "Auld Lang Syne." President and Mrs. Roosevelt remained at the station for a few minutes and then rode back to their country estate. James, John and Franklin Roosevelt Jr., the President's sons, also were on hand at the station, where hundreds sang "Auld Lang Syne" to the King and Queen as they waved good-bye from the rear platform.

Neighboring and informally the Roosevelts and Windsors had started their day together by joining in worship at St. James Episcopal Church. After attending a typical Hyde Park picnic at the President's summer cottage, the President and his guest went swimming together. Tea followed, and then dinner.

Twenty-one persons were guests at the dinner given by the President's mother.

Seated at the mahogany dinner table at Hyde Park house were: The President and Mrs. Roosevelt; King George and Queen Elizabeth; W. L. Mackenzie King, Canadian Prime Minister; the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald and Lady Lindsay; Lady Nuburnholme and Lady Katharine Seymour, ladies-in-waiting to the Queen; Surgeon Capt. Henry White, medical officer of the royal party; George F. Stewart, chief press liaison officer of the party; Capt. Michael Adams, assistant private secretary to the King; Lieutenant Colonel Piers W. Leigh, query to the King, and Dr. E. H. Coleman, secretary of a Canadian committee which arranged the royal tour.

Stephen T. Early, presidential secretary; Brigadier-General Edwin M. Watson, military aid to the King; Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, the President's physician; and the navy's surgeon-general; Miss Marguerite Le Hand, personal secretary to the President; Mrs. Tracy Dows, the President's aunt, and Miss Laura Delano, another Roosevelt relative.

Services at Small Church. The President and King George knelt in worship together yesterday in tiny St. James Episcopal Church, which nestles picturesquely in the trees two miles from the Roosevelt estate.

day in tiny St. James Episcopal Church, which nestles picturesquely in the trees two miles from the Roosevelt estate.

Decorous but excited communicants looked on as Mr. Roosevelt moved into a front row pew of plain walnut. With him in the pew were the King, Queen Elizabeth, Mrs. Roosevelt and the President's mother.

The royal pair joined in the singing of hymns and the responsive readings. The King moved his hand to his forehead during several prayers.

King George is the head of the Anglican Church and "Defender of the Faith." Mr. Roosevelt is a senior warden of St. James Parish, in which he presided at the brief word of greeting to the royal visitors, the services followed the usual Episcopal morning prayer routine.

The Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church, presided at the sermon, in which he asserted that the "nations represented at this service must assume a large share of the responsibility of saving the world of our time from the ills that threaten its well-being."

The rector, the Rev. Frank R. Wilson, a tall, spare man with a receding hairline, eased some of the tension among the communicants when he noted that every seat was filled and interspersed a welcome to the royal visitors.

Pastor's Welcome to Visitors. "One sees what happens when our parishioners bring their guests to the church," he said, "if everyone would do this we would fill the church every Sunday."

"We appreciate the historic visit of their Majesties are making to this parish," he added, looking directly at the King and Queen. "We are happy to add our voice to that of the Mother of England Church in commending Your Majesties to the grace and protection of Almighty God."

At the church entrance, parishioners who could not get inside—and thousands of others striving for a glimpse of the royal visitors—gathered in a courtyard where a group of women sang spontaneously the British national anthem.

They came out strong on the phrases, "God Save the King," but were a little weak through the remainder of the song and fumbled with the words of "America" which has the same melody.

Queen Elizabeth wore a hyacinth crepe, street-length dress with matching halo hat, purse, gloves and shoes and a white gardenia held to her left shoulder by a leaf-shaped diamond clasp.

The President's wife wore a silk chiffon dress in a print designed by her niece, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt II. The print incorporates the Scottish thistle and the American goldenrod in shades of Eleanor blue. A tucked blouse was divided from the skirt by a belt of royal blue, her wide-brimmed hat and purse were of the same shade. She carried white gloves.

In the car with the Queen and Mrs. Roosevelt was the President's mother, wearing a black chiffon dress with white roses and a black turban.

King Wears a Blue Shirt. King George selected a double-breasted, grayish-blue striped sack suit. His shirt and necktie were blue and he carried a gray felt hat. The President wore a plain blue serge suit and a Panama hat.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada rode along to church as the President's eldest son, James, with Betsy, his wife, and Sara, his 8-year-old daughter, James is a vestryman at the church.

In a group confessional, the King and Queen, President and Mrs. Roosevelt, joined in the words: "Let us humbly confess our sins before Almighty God." Bishop Tucker gave absolution.

Then, their Majesties joined in reciting the Lord's prayer and the singing of "Glory Be to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Ghost."

The morning's lessons were taken from the Fourth Chapter of Isaiah and the first chapter of the Epistle of St. John.

Prayers were given for peace and grace and there was a special service for the King and Queen.

King and Queen Enjoy 'Hot Dogs', Beer at Picnic

Apparently Relish Unfamiliar Food in Rustic Surroundings—Mingle Informally With 150 Guests.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., June 12 (AP)—The King and Queen of England approvingly ate American "hot dogs" and drank beer picnic-fashion yesterday on the scenic bluff that shoulders the estate of President Roosevelt high above the Hudson River.

Pork and beans also was on the menu for royalty, along with many other snacks of peculiarly American quality and tradition. Her hose and slippers were also of gray and again a single gardenia nestled on her left shoulder.

The King wore a dark brown sports suit and the President a gray lounge suit.

The President and the Queen, Mrs. Herbert Lehman and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau sat at one of the picnic tables on the porch of the Dutchess Hill cottage.

At the next table were the King, the President's mother, Gov. Lehman and Mrs. Morgenthau. At the other tables were: Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, Mrs. Henry St. George Tucker, wife of the Bishop, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Mrs. Vincent Astor.

Lady Lindsay, Mrs. Tucker, Mrs. Price Collier, Gerald Morgan—the latter two close friends of the Roosevelts.

Mrs. Morgan, Lady Nuburnholme, Lord-in-waiting to the Earl of Eldon, Lord-in-waiting to the King; Lydig Hoyt, another neighbor.

Apparently Relish Unfamiliar Food in Rustic Surroundings—Mingle Informally With 150 Guests.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., June 12 (AP)—The King and Queen of England approvingly ate American "hot dogs" and drank beer picnic-fashion yesterday on the scenic bluff that shoulders the estate of President Roosevelt high above the Hudson River.

Pork and beans also was on the menu for royalty, along with many other snacks of peculiarly American quality and tradition. Her hose and slippers were also of gray and again a single gardenia nestled on her left shoulder.

The King wore a dark brown sports suit and the President a gray lounge suit.

The President and the Queen, Mrs. Herbert Lehman and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau sat at one of the picnic tables on the porch of the Dutchess Hill cottage.

At the next table were the King, the President's mother, Gov. Lehman and Mrs. Morgenthau. At the other tables were: Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, Mrs. Henry St. George Tucker, wife of the Bishop, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Mrs. Vincent Astor.

18 PCT. FLAT TAX ON CORPORATION INCOME FAVORED

Sub-Committee of House
Tentatively Approves
Substitute for Undistributed Profits Levy.

WASHINGTON, June 12 (AP)—A House Ways and Means subcommittee voted tentatively today to substitute a flat 18 per cent tax on corporations with net income over $25,000 for the present undistributed profits levy.

Chairman Cooper (Dem., Tennessee), of the subcommittee, said that under the program tentatively approved corporations with incomes of less than $25,000 would be subject to present rates ranging from 12 1/2 per cent to 16 per cent.

The subcommittee also agreed tentatively to extend existing excise taxes and postal rates for two years. Under present law these would expire June 30. The former are expected to yield about $490,000,000 and the latter from $75,000,000 to $90,000,000.

Other Points Approved. Other major points given tentative approval would be:

1. Allow corporations a carry-over of net operating business losses for two years. Cooper explained that 1939 losses could be carried over in 1940 and any excess of losses could be applied to 1941. Present law permits no carry-over.

2. Allow corporations to increase their capital stock value in each of the next two years but not to decrease it. Present law permits corporations to revalue capital stock in 1941 up or down, and this would not be changed.

3. Tax like other corporations, as to rates, all banks, insurance companies, China Trade Act corporations and corporations in possessions of the United States. Present law imposes a flat 16 1/2 per cent levy.

4. Tax Mutual investment companies at the rate of 18 per cent regardless of income. These are given the same special treatment as banks and insurance companies under the existing law. Such companies would be allowed to deduct from their tax bases dividends paid out.

5. Levy an 18 per cent tax on the source of income of foreign corporations engaged in trade or business in the United States. The present rate is 19 per cent.

6. Continue to tax at the present rate of 15 per cent, except as to dividends, which rate would remain at 10 per cent, foreign corporations not engaged in trade or business in the United States, but which might receive income from dividends, interests, rents, royalties, etc.

7. Treat the same as all other corporations, concerns in bankruptcy or receivership, joint stock banks and rental housing corporations, replacing special credits under present law.

Capital Loss Limit. The subcommittee approved proposals also would repeal the present limitation of $2000 on capital losses for ordinary income of corporations. In the case of long-term capital losses—those held over 18 months—the proposals would allow the losses to be applied in full against the ordinary income of the corporations for the same taxable year in which the losses were realized. In case of short-term capital losses—those held less than 18 months—corporations would be given the same treatment now accorded individuals in cases of short term losses, that is:

Allowing only short term capital losses to be applied to short term losses.

WASHINGTON, June 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt's name will be given to a number of newly discovered members of the fish, crab and worm family.

The specimens were procured by scientists accompanying the President on a cruise to Pacific waters last July. Among the names they have decided on are "Thalassidroma Roosevelti," crustaceans; "Pycnomma Roosevelti," a fish, and "Terebra, conus, marginea and pasciella Roosevelti," members of the mollusk family.

The purpose of the tighter German control, it was reported in Prague, would be to strengthen police regulations in order to prevent clashes among dissatisfied elements of the Czech population and German officials and residents.

TWO OF GRADUATING CLASS KILLED ON WAY TO CEREMONY

Two Others Injured in Auto Collision, En Route to College Baccalaureate.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., June 12 (AP).—Two girls were killed and two fellow students injured yesterday in an automobile crash on their way to a baccalaureate service at Trenton State Teachers' College, where all four were to be graduated this week.

The dead: Jane Patterson, 21 years old of Ardara, daughter of Ernest Patterson, Howell Township Board of Education clerk, and Elizabeth Woolston, 21, of River-ton, daughter of Clinton E. Woolston, an automobile dealer. The coupe driven by Miss Woolston was hooked by the bumper of a station wagon, swung around, turned over and caught fire.

PERSHING GOES FOR AUTO RIDE IN PARIS AFTER LENGTHY REST

World War Commander Scoffs at Reports He Was Ill Following Voyage From U. S.

PARIS, June 12 (AP).—Gen. John J. Pershing, 78-year-old A. E. F. commander in Paris yesterday, went for a drive in his World War car after spending several days in bed resting from his trip from the United States. Associates earlier had said he suffered a heart attack Saturday, but the General scoffed at these reports.

Pershing, who came to France last week as chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission, said he had been tired out by his trip—his seventy-first Atlantic voyage—and had stayed in bed several days resting.

He said his condition was good and there was no cause for alarm.

NAZI DEPUTIES WEAR UNIFORMS IN HUNGARY

40 Take Seats in Parliament; Six Parties Believed United Behind Program.

BUDAPEST, June 12 (AP).—Forty Nazi deputies who wore uniforms including green shirts and high boots strode in at the formal opening of Hungary's new Parliament today and took seats on the extreme left.

The Government party marshaled 202 deputies but was concerned that many of them, chosen in Parliamentary elections May 27 and 28, had shown Nazi leanings. All 202 wore black blouses and gold-fringed black ties—the uniform of the Government party.

Nazi deputies objected to a Jewish photographer taking their pictures but were admonished by their leader, Kalman Hubay, that "propaganda comes before all."

All indications were that the Nazis had unified their six individual parties behind a legislative program intended to revolutionize Hungary's economic and political life.

They expected co-ordination of Hungarian and German domestic policies as a result of the five-day visit here of Wilhelm Frick, German Interior Minister, who went back to Berlin Saturday.

Slovak Flyers Turn Three Planes Over to Poles.

WARSAW, June 12 (AP).—Three Slovak military planes were reported today to have landed at Deblin, a Polish military center southeast of Warsaw, and to have been turned over to Polish authorities by their six flyers.

The Slovak aviators were said to have informed Polish officials that they "preferred to take the planes out of the country instead of having them taken over by the German army."

Slovakia was set up as an independent nation under the protection of Germany in the dissolution of Czechoslovakia last March.

cial prayer for "Elizabeth, Queen Mother Mary and Princess Elizabeth," with the Rev. Mr. Wilson asking God to "give them grace and happiness and bring them to Thy Kingdom."

Additional prayers and hymns were followed by the sermon, whose text was from the Fourth Chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians.

Bishop Tucker indirectly mentioned the illustrious guests only once in his sermon when he declared:

"... the nations represented at this service have come to occupy a position of more than ordinary influence in world affairs."

"Perhaps for this very reason they must assume a large share of the responsibility of saving the world of our time from the ills that threaten its well-being."

Throughout the early part of his sermon, the Bishop stressed the evil of class feeling and group selfishness.

"Too frequently, such (partisan) loyalty instead of increasing our concern for the welfare of those beyond the limits of our own group leads us to ignore it or even makes us feel justified in exploiting it."

"Who Is My Neighbor?" "To love one's neighbor as one's self is an adequate moral principle only when we give an all-inclusive answer to the question, 'who is my neighbor?'" he continued.

"Yet even in this enlightened age when we have accustomed ourselves to speak of the world as a neighborhood, we have found no human means of freeing mankind from its bondage of group selfishness. It still asserts itself in such forms as extreme nationalism, class feeling, race prejudice."

Citing the elder Pitt's guidance of England through a period of crisis, Bishop Tucker commented: "It is obvious that the saving task which is required today is very different both in kind and degree from that undertaken by Pitt. He was concerned primarily with the well-being of a single race and nation. We are beginning to realize that nations no less than individuals are members of one another so that the welfare of one is conditional upon that of all."

Arthur Degroff, a vestryman, proprietor of a bus line and manager of the Hyde Park baseball team, passed a silver collection plate to the President and his royal guests. Although the King ordinarily does not carry money, he dropped in some folded bills—American money. A benediction by Bishop Tucker, the recessional hymn, and a moment of silent prayer while an altar boy snuffed out lighted tapers, concluding the services.

Pair Tell Scott Field Board Wind Made Planes Crash

Louisiana Reserve Pilots Who Bailed Out With Parachutes Near Millstadt, Ill., Report Sudden "Air Bump."

The two Army planes which crashed during a storm Saturday afternoon near Millstadt, Ill., went out of control when they struck an "air bump," a powerful upward gust of wind, their pilots said yesterday in an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter.

So near were the ships to the ground, 1200 feet, that there was no time to pull out of the spins into which they were flung. One flyer went over the side with his parachute immediately. The other tried to right his plane, jumping so late that his chute unfolded only seconds before he reached the ground. Both escaped injury.

The pilots, Lieuts. George M. McNeese and Paul C. Droz, graduates of the Army flying school at Kelly Field, Tex., last year and now reserve officers in active duty with the Seventy-seventh Pursuit Squadron at Barksdale Field, near Shreveport, La., talked to the reporter at Scott Field after appearing before an investigating board of Air Corps officers at that station.

Storm Strikes Suddenly. "We took off at 3 o'clock from Lambert-St. Louis Field, en route to Nashville, Tenn.," McNeese related. "I was leading our two-ship formation, with Droz close behind and to the right. The weather reports showed local thunderstorms but nothing like the severe one we hit."

"Ten minutes out, flying at 1500 feet, we ran right into heavy, low-hanging clouds. Then the storm struck us suddenly. The rain fell in torrents, and the visibility was zero. I tried to get under the clouds, but when we came out we were hedge-hopping, with the trees just below us."

"I couldn't spot a place to land so I pulled into a climb, turning to the right and trying to fly around the storm. Now I was flying blind with my eyes on the instrument board. Droz was so close that our wings almost touched."

"It seemed pitch black. The rain kept hammering against the plane and all the time I was hoping we'd come out into the clear. Then we ran into the 'bump,' a very turbulent current. My ship was thrown up into a vertical position and fell off into a spin. I knew it was no use trying to recover because I was too close to the ground, so I bailed out."

"As I floated near to the ground I saw Droz's plane crash in the distance and burst into flames. Almost immediately I saw Droz come down, his chute opening just before he hit." McNeese landed in a wheat field, about a mile from the farm where his companion came down.

"Plenty Lucky to Be Here." Droz, who is 23 years old, two years younger than McNeese, thought he was "plenty lucky to be here."

"My plane nosed up into a stall too and then went plunging down," he said. "I tried hard to pull out, but I couldn't. I had opened the cockpit hatch, and when I saw there was no saving the plane, I climbed out, kicked clear and pulled the rip cord."

"I heard the plane crash and saw it catch fire. I must have been pretty close to the ground because it seemed my feet hit the ground just after the chute opened."

The flyers met at a farmhouse, changing their wet uniforms for dry clothing, and returned to Lambert Field by automobile after inspecting their wrecked planes, single-seater Curtiss Wright P 36s. McNeese's ship crashed a mile from where he landed.

Other flyers from Barksdale Field, which McNeese and Droz had left on a training flight Saturday morning, flew a two-place plane to them at Scott Field yesterday and they expected to fly back to their home station today.

PLOT TO KILL BRITISH ENVOY AT SHANGHAI IS REPORTED

Heavy Police Guard Placed About Ambassador's Home and Offices.

SHANGHAI, June 12 (AP).—British diplomatic authorities disclosed tonight receipt of information of a plot to kill British Ambassador Sir Archibald John Kerr Clark Kerr.

A heavy police guard was placed about the Ambassador's residence and offices. An authoritative British statement said the information, "which is considered authentic and accurate," indicated the plot "is of a grave nature and threatens Sir Archibald."

Those concerned in the plot were not named. International Settlement police, both Chinese and British, took up stations at the Ambassador's residence and office. Added precautions to guard Sir Archibald when traveling included provision of a bullet-proof automobile and an escort car carrying a squad of police.

Machine guns were stationed at the corners of the garden wall surrounding Sir Archibald's residence.

DENTIST WHO KILLED WIFE AND SON GETS LIFE TERM

Pittsburgh Judge Influenced by Psychiatrist's Report Dr. Norman Stewart II.

PITTSBURGH, June 12 (AP).—Dr. Norman Stewart II, who pleaded guilty of murdering his first wife and namesake son, was sentenced today to life imprisonment by Judge Frank F. Patterson.

The sentence was imposed for killing the 4-year-old son. Sentence was suspended on the charge of the murder of Mrs. Stewart.

Judge Patterson said he had decided to send Stewart to the electric chair, but the report of a psychiatrist had caused him to reduce the punishment. He commented: "I am not sure I shouldn't impose the highest penalty, even now."

He said the dentist, who for nearly four years dodged the law before he returned here and admitted the murders, "showed a shrewdness which only goes with intelligent understanding."

Stewart said he surrendered to ease his conscience.

King, Queen Back in Canada, To Visit Eastern Provinces

formal week-end visit with President and Mrs. Roosevelt at Hyde Park than at any time during their tour of more than 7000 miles. Lunching on picnic plates, they sampled the American hot dog; drank beer; rode in an old automobile, with the President driving, through the beautiful Hudson Valley and attended a country church.

The preacher—a Bishop—went home to a meal with them, and in the afternoon the King and the President went swimming together in the new pool on the Roosevelt estate. The wives and "Ma"—Mrs. Roosevelt's affectionate name for the President's mother—just visited.

Queen Elizabeth had walked up the aisle of St. James Parish Church gently assisting the 84-year-old mother of the President. For the select 200 who were admitted to the church because they had attended regularly, this unexpected touch helped relieve the awe occasioned by the sight of a sovereign of the world's greatest empire and the President of the United States seated on the front pew.

Wave Them Farewell. After a day crowded with friendly contacts, the Roosevelts took their guests down to the little railroad station at Hyde Park, and with handclaps and waves of good-by sent them off to Canada again. A throng sang "Auld Land Syne" as the train pulled out, with the King and Queen waving from the rear platform.

The special train stopped for 20 minutes at Rensselaer, near Albany, late last night, but the King and Queen evidently had retired, and were not seen by knots of people who stood in the rain.

Just before entraining, the King handed the President a souvenir—a gold "inkpot," a stand, decorated with the King's coat of arms.

Today he will send to the President a more formal declaration of gratitude for the official hospitality of the American Government and for the general friendliness of the American people.

This message, expected to follow the general form of that sent to France after a State visit last year, will require no answer.

World Problems Discussed. The President and the King had frequent opportunities at Washington and at Hyde Park to discuss world problems generally, but neither attached much importance to these conversations. More notable, in the minds of observers, was the outpouring of friendly feeling for the visitors by all manner of Americans during their visit.

The visitors appeared to please these crowds as much as they do Londoners.

The only criticism heard anywhere was that the appearances of the King and Queen were too late, that their automobile moved too rapidly for them to be seen, or that safety precautions were too elaborate to give the crowds a good view.

The only time the King registered displeasure was at the New York World's Fair, where he asked to be excused from greeting a long line of people in the Federal Building, saying it would delay his schedule and would keep waiting the thousands outside the building.

The Queen even was displeased at anything, it was not disclosed.

The visitors' experiences from the time they left Canada Wednesday night were as unusual for them as their presence for a democratic people with story-book ideas of Kings and Queens.

Meets American Hot-Dog. In Washington, New York and Hyde Park they saw new sights and new customs.

Typical was the hot-dog picnic at Hyde Park. The President's mother at first objected to this item on the menu, but finally relented.

It was rumored that her English butler, who has presided over the dining room for many years, took his annual vacation at the time of the visit, partly because he could not bear the thought of serving such plebeian food to the sovereigns.

The President's wife had said hot dogs would be served if the weather was cool. Word trickled unofficially from the British Embassy that the King was looking forward to meeting a hot dog—and the issue was sealed.

About 175 friends and neighbors of the Roosevelts gathered for the picnic at the President's retreat overlooking the Hudson.

King Takes Movies. Such notables as Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York mingled with Moses Smith, caretaker on the Roosevelt estate, and Frank Drice, county roadworker, who brought nine of his 10 children.

The King and Queen unbent so that they eventually dispensed with formal introductions and presentations. The King got out his small motion picture camera to make his own record of this phase of a tour.

After driving with the President (the King had to hold his gray felt hat), and after a small dinner given by the President's mother, the King and Queen exchanged autographed photographs with the Roosevelts and gave similar pictures to the more important members of the White House staff. Then they were off to the train.

PRESIDENT TELLS CADETS U. S. CAN'T SHOW WEAKNESS

can be no greater than its internal economic and moral solidarity, and the task of national defense must concern itself with civilian problems at home, quite as much as with armed forces in the field.

A battery of field artillery fired a 21-gun salute as the President entered the academy grounds through the south gate. He had driven down the Hudson River from his home at Hyde Park, where he had good-bye last night to King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Brigadier-General Jay L. Benedict, superintendent of the military academy, met Mr. Roosevelt at the gate and rode with him to the armory, between lines of mounted cavalrymen at attention.

As the chief executive stepped on to the speaker's platform the cadet regiment snapped to a salute and its band played "Hail to the Chief" and the national anthem.

After the exercises the President left on a special train for Washington, where a 21-gun salute roared out in his honor.

WARDEN LEWIS E. LAWES WED

Sing Sing Prison Head Married April 19, He Discloses.

OSWING, N. Y., June 12 (AP).—Lewis E. Lawes, warden of Sing Sing Prison for 19 years, last night announced his marriage on April 19 in Arlington, Va., to Miss Elise Chisholm, of Oswining.

Lawes said he had intended keeping the wedding secret until after the marriage of his daughter, Kathleen, on June 27 to Charles Miller of St. Louis, Mo., but that recurring rumors of his marriage forced an earlier announcement.

Mrs. Lawes, the daughter of Mrs. Eloise McGehee Chisholm of Summit, Miss., is a theatrical press agent. She is 35 years old. The warden is 55. Lawes' first wife, Kathryn, died of injuries suffered in a fall down a hillside in 1937.

BRITONS SAY KING GOT A 'PROPER' RECEPTION

General Opinion Is Relations Will Not Be Affected One Way or Other.

LONDON, June 12 (AP).—Britons have decided after four days of study that King George VI and Queen Elizabeth got a "proper reception" in the United States.

Newspaper correspondents were amazed at the number of soldiers and police used to guard the King and Queen but that did not surprise some Londoners.

"They must 'ave them," one woman said, "what with all those red Indians and train robbers about."

The American movies "Jesse James," "Stagecoach" and "Union Pacific" are playing to standees here.

Not one British subject interviewed seemed to believe that British-American relations would be affected one way or another.

"Like Reception to Film Star." "It's a bit like a reception we would give a film star," said a bus driver. "I was over there and I know it doesn't mean a thing."

A clerk commented, "of course they like them. 'E's a fine young man and she's a nice little body. But they ain't selling any goods. Why should they? The Yankers wouldn't like guests to try to sell them anything."

One man wanted to know why President Roosevelt didn't "command" absent Congressmen to attend the Capitol reception. A waiter asked if the King would knight Roosevelt and when told it was forbidden by the Constitution to accept such an honor asked, "The Constitution—what's that?"

Nine out of 10, it seemed, would like to see Roosevelt visit Britain. Said a caddy: "If 'e did come Hitler and Mussolini would be properly put about, wouldn't they now?"

Sunday Picnic Makes Hit. Everybody appeared to like the idea of the Sunday picnic at Hyde Park—after they had got the idea that it wasn't at all like London's Hyde Park with its orators and spooners.

"Now that was very decent of Mr. Roosevelt, y'know," said an elderly minor civil servant. "That's a nice way of doing things—almost British in fact. No bands, no maneuvers, just having a day in the country like gentlemen."

Britain is planning an expansive welcome when Their Majesties return June 22. Steamship companies already are advertising places on boats which will meet the liner Empress of Britain. It was possible that a service of thanksgiving would be held at St. Paul's to mark their safe return.

FIRST CASE OF 'BENDS' IN SQUALUS SALVAGE WORK

Diver, Blown to Surface, Has to Be Kept All Night in Decompression Chamber.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 12 (AP).—The first case of the "bends"—dread ailment that attacks men who work under high pressure when too suddenly released from the pressure—was reported from the task of raising the submarine Squalus, temporary tomb of 26 men.

Walter Squires, 31 years old, of Los Angeles, who was treated and then released from a decompression chamber after being "blown" by the surface Saturday from a depth of 240 feet, and to be put back into the "iron doctor" when he exhibited symptoms on the paralyzing pressure complaint.

Squires was forced to remain all Saturday night in the decompression chamber under a pressure equivalent to that experienced at 30 feet below surface. He recovered yesterday morning and took shore leave.

U. S. WARSHIPS NOT SO GOOD AS JAPAN'S, SAYS JAPANESE

Tokyo Naval Construction Expert Believes Best American Vessels Inferior to His Country's.
TOKYO, June 12 (AP).—The Japan Times and Mail quoted Commander Masahide Iwasaki, a naval construction expert, today as saying that the United States naval program was aimed at Germany and not Japan.

He returned to Yokohama after two years in the United States, where he inspected factories. An interview quoted him as declaring American naval experts admitted the United States navy was far behind those of other Powers, especially Germany, and that a navy program must be drafted with Germany in mind.

"I have seen many American warships, and, while they are built, I believe the best of them cannot be compared to Japan's," Iwasaki said. "It is my opinion that Japanese warships are without equal."

(The Japan Times and Mail, English, is Japanese-owned and edited and is known as an organ of the Foreign Office.)

SOMERSWORTH, N. H., June 12 (AP).—Old currency totaling $18,755, found in musty packages in a cellar, has been added to the estate of Edward D. Some of the bills, including one of $10 and $100 denomination, were wrapped in 1915 newspaper.

SENATE GROUP FIGHT TO RETAIN EMBARGO ON A

Opponents of Modification of Neutrality Law Fight to Extend Session to August.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Senate opponents of neutral revision claimed today to have support of at least 24 Senators said they would serve notice of administration that if it were repealed, the arms embargo would be a fight to prolong the session at least mid-August.

A member of the group would be carried to Roosevelt early this week by active part in the neutral revision. The chief executive due to return tonight from Park.

There were indications, moreover, that the administration was conducting its own private Senate sentiment on the arms embargo by discarding of a system of presidential of wartime shipping.

Question of Adjournment. Senator Barkley of Kentucky, however, that he thought the Senate should adjourn for more information to give the president a chance to make a statement about a proposed adjournment date than last when they were understood to tell him in effect that all but neutrality would be cleaned up by July 15.

Both Senate and House committees may consider legislation this week. Chairman Pittman (Dem., Nev.), said he would ask the Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday to set a date up pending measures. Non-measure before this committee Hull's suggestions explain Pittman has a bill which repeals the present law of a system of presidential of wartime shipping.

The House Foreign Affairs committee will continue work by its acting chairman, Representative Bloom (Dem.), New York, which embodies the Hull proposal.

Effect of Royal Visit. There was some discussion of the possibility of the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth on the neutral controversy. Opponents have that the Hull proposals would of direct benefit to England, her control of the seas likely enable her to obtain munitions while cutting off the ship her opponent.

Senator Connally (Dem., N. Y.), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he believed visit has softened some of the criticism of Greece's policies. "A lot of these members came to scoff at the reception for the King and went away with a different attitude," Connally declared.

On the other hand, Senator (Rep.), Idaho, who is a consistent critic of Greece's course, indicated that his ideas had not been in contact with the Senate that nation.

Women Voters' Request. The National League of Women Voters urged its state divisions today to assist in a drive to have Congress act on foreign affairs legislation.

Marguerite M. Wells, national administrator of the League, recommended amendments to the Social Act and extension of civil and opposition to pending amendments to the new Food Act.

With neutrality apparently only issue threatening controversy, Congress will have week to clear its docket, legislation.

Originator of Basketball. OVERLAND PARK, Kan., June 12 (AP).—Dr. James Naismith, 42-year-old inventor of basketball, professor of physical education at the University of Kansas, Florence Kincaid, 56, house mother, were married Saturday.

SENATE GROUP TO FIGHT TO RETAIN EMBARGO ON ARMS

Opponents of Modification of Neutrality Law Threaten to Extend Session Into August.

WASHINGTON, June 12 (AP).—Senate opponents of neutrality law revision claimed today to have the support of at least 24 Senators and said they would serve notice on the administration that if it insisted on repeal of the arms embargo there would be a fight certain to prolong the session at least until mid-August.

A member of the group said this would be carried to President Roosevelt early this week by a Senator who thus far has taken no active part in the neutrality controversy. The chief executive is due to return tonight from Hyde Park.

There were indications, meantime, that the administration was conducting its own private check of Senate sentiment on the proposal of Secretary of State Hull that the arms embargo be discarded in favor of a system of presidential control of wartime shipping.

Question of Adjournment.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Senate Democratic chief, said, however, that he thought congressional leaders would have little more information to give the President Tuesday about a prospective adjournment date than last week, when they were understood to have told him in effect that all legislation except neutrality could be cleaned up by July 15.

Both Senate and House Foreign committees may consider neutrality legislation this week.

Chairman Pittman (Dem.), Nevada, said he would ask the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday to set a date to take up pending measures. None of the measure before this committee fulfills Hull's suggestions exactly, but Pittman has a bill which includes repeal of the present law's mandatory embargo on arms sales to nations at war.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee will continue work on a bill by its acting chairman, Representative Bloom (Dem., New York), which embodies the Hull program.

Effect of Royal Visit.

There was some discussion in senatorial circles of the possible effect of the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth on the neutrality controversy. Opponents have said that the Hull proposals would be of direct benefit to England, in event of war in Europe, because her control of the seas likely would enable her to obtain munitions here while cutting off the shipping of her opponent.

Senator Connally (Dem.), Texas, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he believed the visit has softened some of the congressional criticism of Great Britain's policies.

"A lot of these members who came to scoff at the Capitol reception for the King and Queen went away with a different attitude," Connally declared.

On the other hand, Senator Borah (Rep.), Idaho, who has been a consistent critic of Great Britain's course, indicated clearly that his ideas had not been changed by his contact with the sovereigns of that nation.

Women Voters' Requests.

The National League of Women Voters urged its state organizations today to assist in a drive to have Congress act on four measures before adjourning. In a letter to state league presidents, Miss Marguerite M. Wells, national president, recommended support of the administration's neutrality bill, amendments to the Social Security Act and extension of civil service, and opposition to pending amendments to the new Food and Drug Act.

With neutrality apparently the only issue threatening major controversy, Congress will hasten this week to clear its docket of other legislation.

Originator of Basketball Wed.

OVERLAND PARK, Kan., June 12 (AP).—Dr. James Naismith, 77-year-old inventor of basketball and professor of physical education at the University of Kansas, and Mrs. Florence Kincaid, 56, fraternity house mother, were married here Saturday.

NEW YORK, June 12 (AP).—Eight United States winners of the eighth annual World Bridge Olympic, in which players in 40 nations competed April 27, were announced yesterday. The world champion, however, will not be known for about 10 days, because all scores are not in.

The winning American team was composed of Mrs. C. C. Covington and Anton Bugge, Houston, Tex., and Miss Marcella Miller and Mandel Shimberg, Leavenworth, Kan. In second place was the team of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Healy, Chicago, and Oscar J. Brotman and Alvin Roth, Washington, D. C.

ATLANTIC PASSENGER FLIGHTS BEGIN JUNE 28

More Than 300 Have Applied for Seats; Some Reservations Years Old.

NEW YORK, June 12 (AP).—Pan American Airways announces the world's first passenger service over the Atlantic will be started June 28.

Just who will be carried on the first flight, out of the hundreds who have applied for tickets, was not specified.

More than 300 persons put in their bids for a seat in the first passenger flight. More than twice that many applied for reservations on that or a subsequent flight. There are 25 or so seats available. Some of the "reservations" are years old. First position on the list originally belonged to the late Will Rogers.

The cost will be $275 one way and $575 for a round-trip. The one-way fare compares with $316 for a first class ticket on the liners Queen Mary and Normandie.

The elapsed time between the United States and Marseille, France, will be 44 hours. Temporarily, an overnight stop will be made at Lisbon, Portugal. Air liners leaving the company's base at Port Washington, N. Y., will touch first at Horta, the Azores. The elapsed time to Lisbon will be 22 hours.

While passenger service on the so-called "southern route" is being started, other company flying boats will have initiated the "northern route" via Shediac, N. B., Botwood, Newfoundland, and Foynes, Ireland, to Southampton. The "great circle" course to Europe, over which the first mail plane will fly June 24, is the shorter of the two routes but is impracticable for use except during the summer months due to unfavorable weather conditions. New York will be only 24½ hours from London on the northern course.

With the start of passenger service, a schedule of two round trips a week will be instituted. The passenger plane will leave Port Washington every Wednesday and the mail plane every Saturday. The passenger clipper will leave Marseille each Sunday and arrive in Port Washington Tuesday morning, with an overnight stop in Lisbon. The mail clipper will leave Southampton each Wednesday and arrive here Thursday afternoon. The company has on file with the Civil Aeronautics Authority a request for permission to start a service of four round trips a week. The overnight stop in Lisbon is necessary at present because permission has yet to be obtained from the Spanish Government to fly over Spain, and from French authorities for night landings at Marseille.

Jonas Weiss, two-time winner of the St. Louis District junior championship and former of the Missouri Valley Golf title, added the district crown to his collection yesterday when he defeated Bob Stamm, mandie Golf Club redhead, 2 in the 36-hole final match, twenty-fourth annual tournament at Belleview Country Club. Weiss, a graduate of University City High School, where he brought the high school championship to his school and later member of the Washington University golf team, is only 21 years old. He lives with his mother, and elder brother at 765 S. avenue, University City and getting started on a career as a man for a corrugated box factory. Weiss is a member of the Lake Country Club where Herpel, professional, has him considerably in development game to the point where he been able to wade through the competition the district off the title heights.

Jonas is a dogged, determined player and he had to call these attributes in winning Stamm, who goes after all holes from whatever point on the he happens to be.

Weiss gained a two-up, the morning round with 72 for Stamm, while Bob Stamm, against 76 for Weiss in the noon. Stamm, however, was able to reduce the lead which built up early.

The turning point of the perhaps, came on the eighth hole in the afternoon, was one down at the time he and Jonas hit screaming to the right of the fairway 230-yard par four hole. Stamm's second within 30 inches pin for a "gimme" birdie. Weiss was 12 to 15 feet away jammed the putt down for three and so did Stamm.

Weiss won the next hole two up again. Then after two holes, Bob Stamm counts by winning the third and thirty-third hole, his tee shot out of bounds thirty-fourth, however, and hole to a six by Weiss. Je his second shot around a the thirty-fifth and got four to end the match when took a five.

Stamm made the first standing shot of the day, rammed home a 40-foot putt 14th green, but Jonas came back with one about 35 on the next hole.

Jim Cochran, Forest Park of Bob Cochran won consolation class title, defeated Davenport, also of Forest and 3. Jack Hart, Belleview, the Class A trophy, defeated Westborough, 1 up. B. Milton Frank, University won from Ray Woodward, Lake, 3 and 2.

Weiss is planning on the State tournament in City if his business, and employer, permit.

The championship was year by Chester O'Brien not defend as he competes U. S. Open in Philadelphia.

YOUNG RETAINS HIS NEGRO GOLF CROWN

Richard Young retained his Negro golf championship by defeating Sam Shepard, on the 18-hole course in Ford yesterday, in the final match of the annual spring golf championship for Negroes sponsored by the Mount Golf Club.

Winner in the A Flight, Bibbs who defeated Ray, 3 and 2; William Alexander, 3 and 2; Alfred Wilson, 6 and 5; and 2. Young, 6 and 5, won the B flight title, while Holten beat Garfield Kirkwood 2 to take the C flight championship. Mrs. Julia Siler, local champion retained her title defeating Mrs. McConico in a 5 and 4 decision.

MISS LALUMONDIER WINS THREE TITLES IN OZARK GAMES

ALISON TAKES POST-DISPATCH POINT TROPHY

Six Records Are Established and One Is Equalled in Meet Won by Cape Girardeau Team.

By Robert Morrison

Crystal City saw its athletes take individual honors in the Ozark A. U. track meet yesterday, as Clinton Allison won the Post-Dispatch's man's high point trophy with 12 points and Thelma Lalumondier pulled the hat trick on the three women's events.

But Dee Boeckmann, chairman of the American Olympic Committee for women, believed she saw a possible national winner, the same Miss Lalumondier.

The former St. Louisian, who is the only woman ever to coach a woman's Olympic track team, watched the Crystal City High School girl running the two sprints and jumping the broad jump, and although her time for the dashes were slow, Miss Boeckmann said she thought Miss Lalumondier could win at the nationals this year.

Has Chance in Nationals. "She was a little weak but possibly the pressure of school work has kept her from reaching top condition," Miss Boeckmann said. "If she gets those arms up, not run with them swinging down at her sides, and lean forward when she runs, she can win at the National."

Miss Lalumondier won the 50-yard dash in 6.3 seconds, two-tenths slower than her time last year, and the 100-yard sprint in 11.9, five-tenths off her performance a year ago. She defeated Mrs. Elizabeth Wilde Kinnard, 1932 Olympian, by five yards in the longer race. Mrs. Kinnard, because of lack of conditioning, did not compete in the 50-yard race.

The girl from Crystal City, however, did very well in the broad jump as she set a new Ozark record of 17 feet 8 1/2 inches. Wins 440-Yard Event. Allison was a product of the same Crystal City High School coach, Jerome (Red) Blanton. Running for the Cape Girardeau Teachers' Club, which successfully defended its team championship, Allison won the quarter-mile dash, was second in the 220-yard sprint, third in the 100 and a member of the winning Cape 440-yard sprint relay team and the losing mile relay quartet.

The Cape sprint relay team was awarded victory in its event when the St. Louis Relay Association team was disqualified for, of all things, forgetting to start out with a baton.

Charles Struz, Southern Illinois Teachers' team, competing with the St. Louis R. A. gave Allison a close race for the Post-Dispatch trophy, winning the 100 and 220-yard dashes and running on the mile relay team which won, for a total of 11 1/2 points.

Six New Records Set. Other double winners were Rev. Burn Gordon, St. Louis R. A., in the 80 and mile and Robert Elder, Westminster College, in the two hurdle races.

Six new records were established and one tied. Of the eight defending champions only Miss Lalumondier and Tom Paisley, Cape Girardeau, were successful. Paisley retained his discus title.

The Cape team had a good point margin—70.6 to 52.4 for the St. Louis Relay Association, its nearest competitor.

official form until 1845, when Alexander Cartwright organized the Knickerbocker Baseball Club in New York. The chief contribution of this organization was the set of rules devised in 1845. On June 19, 1846, the Knickerbockers played the first official baseball game. The opposing team was styled the New York Club but was merely a pickup group.

To the amazement of all, the "pickup" players walloped the stylish Knickerbockers, 23 to 1. They played only four innings, the rules as then drafted stipulating that the side scoring 21 runs was the winner.

In Knickerbocker Days. THE FIRST RULES as devised by the Knickerbockers show how different was the play of that day compared to the present. And yet several features have been retained. One rule may be considered as never having been altered. That is the distance between the bases.

Fields were not surveyed then. In laying out diamonds distances were paced off—a pace being one stride or one yard. The rules of the Knickerbockers, calling for a diagonal distance across the diamond of "42 paces," indicated it was 126 feet from home plate to second base and also from first to third measured in a direct line.

And, substantially, that's what those distances are now. They survey 127 feet, 3 1/2 inches each today.

PRACTICALLY everything else connected with the game has been changed. But the Knickerbockers of 1846 ran almost exactly the same distance from first, second and third bases as they do now—90 feet each.

Those ancient rules are worth examining. Here they are as drawn up 94 years ago:

Sec. 1—The bases shall be from "home" to second base, 42 paces; from first to third base 42 paces; equidistant.

Sec. 2—The game to consist of 21 counts or runs (but at the conclusion an equal number of hands (outs) must be played).

Sec. 3—The ball must be pitched (underhand) and not thrown (free-hand) for the bat.

Sec. 4—A ball knocked outside the range of the first or third base is foul.

Sec. 5—Three balls being struck at and missed, and the last one caught, is a hand out; if not caught, it is considered foul and the striker (batter) is bound to run.

Sec. 6—A ball being struck or tipped, and caught, either flying on the first bounce, is a hand out.

HITCHCOCK IS STAR IN U. S. POLO TRIUMPH

NEW YORK, June 12 (AP).—At an age when most athletes are content to paste up scrapbooks, Tommy Hitchcock is still doing an honest imitation of Tenyson's brook—the one that went on and on.

Tommy never will see the sunny side of 40 again but if you study the play-by-play account of yesterday's second, and clinching, match of the international polo series with the British, you find the story around the flashing mallet that "Mr. Polo" himself wielded.

The Americans called on team play, with Hitchcock the hub around which the victory spun, to carry them to an easy triumph in a match that makes next Sunday's battle merely an excuse for the horse set (there were some 21,000 in that category yesterday)—to sun themselves at beautiful old Westbury. They'll play old and hard—but the cup is safe again since Sunday's victory was the second straight, Hitchcock & Co. having won the opener a week ago by 11-7. The game, remarkably clean, marked the twelfth straight triumph scored by the defenders since they regained the cup in 1921.

MILK PRICES CUT 3 CENTS BY BIG COMPANIES HERE

Highland, St. Louis, Quality Dairies Follow Pevely in Reducing Delivered Grade A to 10 Cents.

Major St. Louis milk distributors today announced a reduction of 3 cents a quart in the retail price of milk delivered on routes, effective immediately. Grade A milk which has been selling for 13 cents a quart, now is 10 cents.

The 3-cent price cut for quarts also will apply to special grade A milk formerly retailing at 16 cents and irradiated homogenized milk which has been selling at 14 cents. The new price is the lowest since milk marketing agreements under supervision of the United States Department of Agriculture became effective in November, 1933.

Prices for quantities more than quarts also were reduced. The price revisions were: Grade A, 22 cents to 18 cents for half-gallons and 40 cents to 32 cents for gallons; irradiated homogenized, 25 cents to 20 cents for half-gallons and 42 to 36 cents for gallons.

Others Follow Pevely. When word that the Pevely Dairy Co. would announce a price cut today reached offices of Highland Dairy Farms Co. and St. Louis Dairy Co., both controlled by National Dairy Products Co., they announced that they would meet the lower prices. The Quality Dairy Co. made a like announcement.

Elmer M. Kerckhoff, vice-president of Pevely Dairy Co., said the reductions were made "as a means of meeting competition and as a sales stimulant."

At the Pevely offices it was said the St. Louis milk market had been "chaotic for the past five months" and that the price reduction was for the purpose of "stabilization." Producers received an increase from $2.10 to $2.20 a hundred pounds or 4.63 cents a quart for milk sold as fluid milk under an amendment to the milk marketing order for the St. Louis milkshed approved April 1.

Paul Y. Versen, president of Highland Dairy Farms Co., and B. M. Lide Jr., president of St. Louis Dairy Co., declined to discuss reasons for the price reduction beyond the general statement they were meeting Pevely competition.

The cut was looked on by those familiar with the St. Louis milk market as an attempt by the large distributors operating extensive delivery routes to regain losses resulting from increased cash and carry sales through stores.

Until last January, the retail price of milk in quart bottles at stores was 12 cents. Then, small distributors began supplying stores with milk in gallon containers at prices which permitted their retail sale at 36 cents.

Route Firms Met Demand. Distributors operating routes found a demand for milk in gallon and half-gallon containers on their routes at reduced prices and met it.

Some chain stores announced they would reduce milk prices tomorrow but officers said it had not been determined what the new prices would be.

Store prices for milk in quart bottles have been from 1 to 3 cents lower than route prices. These prices varied because of the wholesale sources and butterfat content of the milk. The butterfat content and sanitary standards for all milk met requirements of the St. Louis milk ordinance for Grade A.

Prices for half-gallons and gallons varied also, but generally were somewhat below the route price.

Some small dealers who marketed milk through peddlers operating their own trucks also built up considerable volume at the expense of the larger distributors since they could do business at lower cost. Since these small dealers distribute through peddlers, they do not have to pay drivers the $39 a week union scale, operate and maintain trucks, pay social security taxes and other costs incident to operation of a delivery system. Peddlers likewise avoided some of the overhead necessary to large scale distribution.

Recently, negotiations were opened for a renewal of contracts with the A. F. of L. Milk Wagon Drivers' and Inside Dairy Workers' Union which expire July 1.

The union is asking for wage increases of $2 a week for all workmen. Drivers for wholesale milk concerns get $41 a week and inside workers $23.

NEW YORK FAIR ATTENDANCE 'NOT PERTURBING' OFFICIALS

Publicity Director's Statement Follows Comparatively Small Crowds Over the Weekend.

NEW YORK, June 12 (AP).—New York World's Fair officials are not perturbed at the comparatively small attendance over the last weekend, Perley Boone, publicity director, said today.

Boone said he knew nothing of a report that the fair corporation's board of directors planned to meet tonight to consider the attendance figures. He said the attendance was running according to the schedule on which Grover A. Whalen, corporation president, predicted a 50,000,000 gate for the summer.

Saturday's attendance was 196,116, although there had been unofficial advance estimates of 1,000,000 because of the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth. Sunday's figures were 192,190, of which 30,820 were passes.

The total attendance up to last midnight was 7,455,835 for the last 30 days since the fair's opening April 30. This includes about 32,000 daily passes.

BETHALTO, ILL., MAN KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

John H. Cook, Western Cartridge Co. Executive, Fatally Hurt Returning From Picnic.

John H. Cook of Bethalto, Ill., a night superintendent of the Western Cartridge Co. in East Alton, died in Alton Memorial Hospital yesterday of internal injuries suffered Saturday night when the automobile in which he was riding went off Illinois Highway 140 near Bethalto and overturned. He was 56 years old.

Cook and two companions were returning to Bethalto in a rainstorm from a picnic held by a group of employees of the cartridge company. Deputy Coroner Harry Marks of Madison County said the right wheels of the car went off the road on a curve and that the automobile sideswiped a truck approaching from the opposite direction when the driver tried to swerve back onto the highway.

The car then went off the road a second time and overturned after striking a tree. Cook's companions, J. C. Smith and Roy Van Meter of Bethalto, were not injured. It was not learned who was driving.

Driver Speeds Away After Auto Hits Man; Suspect Held. Phillip Eanna, residing at Dorsett road and Michael avenue, Maryland Heights, suffered a brain concussion and fracture of the right shoulder last night when struck by an automobile near his home. He was taken to St. Louis County Hospital.

Charles Nova, who was sitting on the front porch of his home, said he saw Eanna walking in Dorsett road and heard an impact after an automobile came into view over a hill. The driver of the automobile stopped, turned around and drove back to where Eanna had been walking, and then turned around again and continued on his way, Nova said.

Shortly after the accident, Deputy Sheriff reported finding an automobile with license plates corresponding to the number given them by Nova in front of a tavern near Creve Coeur Lake. In the tavern they arrested a man who said he was Clarence R. Campbell Jr., 2404 Walton avenue, Vinita Park.

Campbell admitted driving the automobile but said Eanna had walked into his path and that he had stopped to give his name to by.

'Only Way to Keep Justice From Being Destroyed in Era of Power Politics,' He Says.

HIS EARLIER SPEECH
TARGET OF ATTACK

Liberal Declares It Appeared 'Another Cynical Deal With Aggressors Was Under Way.'

LONDON, June 12 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax asserted tonight that this is an "era of power politics" and those who do not want to see justice and order destroyed must be "prepared to meet force with force."

Winding up a lengthy foreign affairs debate in the House of Lords, he said:

"Whether you like it or not you have got to recognize that in this year of grace 1939 you are living in an era of power politics and the question on which we have got to make up our minds is—so long as force is placed in the position of arbiter what are the purposes for which you wish to see force employed?"

"Is your force to be used for the promotion or the destruction of things like justice and order on which human society depends and which your view is that you cannot afford to see these things disappear from the world then you are surely bound to be prepared to meet force with force."

Previous Speech Criticized.
Halifax spoke after opposition peers had criticized his speech in the House of Lords last Thursday as "ill-timed" and "confusing."

In that speech he said that "provided that the independence of nations is recognized, Britain was not only willing but anxious to explore the whole problem of economic liberalism (living peace) not only for Germany but for all European nations."

Lord Davies, a member of the Liberal party, said:

"At a moment when the Government was building up a peace front it created an impression that 'appeasement' policy, Halifax said."

"It is a sign of some confused thinking to suggest or argue that my speech implied any change whatever in British policy."

Realities of Situation.
On the contrary, he said, the speech Thursday was only a frank attempt to get the people "here and elsewhere to face the realities of the present situation."

Replying to some conservative members who expressed opposition to entering an alliance with Russia, which the Government is trying to negotiate, Halifax said he would not argue the question of principle involved.

"That is an academic question in that the Government have chosen their course and cannot depart from it," Halifax said. "Negotiations with the Soviet Government are about to be resumed in Moscow, and therefore it would be neither profitable nor possible at this stage to enter into further details as to the matters that will be discussed."

Urges Patience in Danzig.
Lord Halifax repeated Britain's determination to stand by its guarantees to Poland and at the same time declared the Danzig problem "demands the utmost measure of patience and restraint if the most serious and dangerous consequences are to be avoided."

He said he wanted to emphasize Prime Minister Chamberlain's recent statement that Britain wished to see the problem settled amicably but that if any attempt were made to change the situation by force in such a way as to threaten Poland's independence it would start a war in which Britain would be involved.

Replying to members who expressed concern over the Far Eastern situation, Halifax said Britain had not been "indifferent" to any one of Japanese threats to British interests. "He denied reports that Britain was planning to reduce the number of its troops in the Shanghai area."

Chamberlain Renews Plea.
Earlier in the House of Commons Chamberlain said mutual confidence was a prerequisite to a successful international conference on Europe's problems and that the British Government was working to promote such confidence.

Chamberlain made his statement

WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES G. ROSS

Significance of Mr. Ickes' Article Urging a Third Term for President Roosevelt — A Gun Held at the Head of the Democratic Convention.

WASHINGTON, June 12. SECRETARY ICKES complains that the article he wrote for the magazine "Look," entitled "Why I Want Roosevelt to Run Again," appeared in "distorted and mutilated form." He has therefore given out the full text.

Whether or not the charge of distortion is true, the article was certainly abbreviated, and in at least one important particular the condensed version gave an imperfect idea of the Secretary's views. On the subject of a possible third-party movement in 1940, they were much more clearly defined—they have more bite—than the following paragraph as printed in the "Look" article would indicate:

A liberal like Fiorello LaGuardia, running on a third-party ticket, might be able to rally behind him both the liberals who have left the G. O. P. and the more forward-looking Democrats. A third party would not be expected to win on the first try, but if a conservative is elected in 1940, the liberals will probably have him on the run long before 1944.

What the Secretary wrote, he states, is as follows:

Liberals who left the Republican party and who have followed Franklin D. Roosevelt from 1932 to 1939 will not stultify themselves by voting for a reactionary Democrat. They will not take too kindly to a Republican reactionary, but if they have no other choice they will prefer a Republican to a Democratic reactionary. However, there is a good chance that they would get behind such a liberal as Fiorello LaGuardia in a third-party movement, not necessarily because they would expect to win the first try with a third-party movement, but because, impelled by the faith that in them, they would feel bound to keep up the liberal fight in the belief that any conservative elected in 1940 would be well on his way out long before 1944, when the liberals, if they had not been false to their faith, would again move into power on perhaps the most permanent basis that they have ever been in power in this country.

There is such a vagueness about the paragraph as it appeared in the published magazine article that little attention was paid to it in the news summaries. The Secretary's full text carries a much more definite threat of a revolt led by "such a liberal as LaGuardia" if the Democrats nominate a conservative for the presidency. There "is a good chance," in that event, that a third ticket will be put into the field. It is to be noted, too, that Mr. Ickes fits into classification of those one-time Republicans who went with Roosevelt in 1932 and who now, if they have to make the choice, "will prefer a Republican to a Democratic reactionary." His statement is a clear threat that if a conservative Democrat is nominated, he will cut loose from the Democratic party and either vote for the Republican nominee or join a third-party movement.

Mr. Ickes is careful to speak only for those "liberals who left the Republican party" to support Roosevelt, but his statement is intended to rally all shades of New Dealers to the third-party movement if one is got under way with a view to keeping the New Deal cause alive and taking command of the Government again in 1945.

The threat of a liberal revolt represents one of the principal shots in the locker of those who are trying to get a third term for President Roosevelt. What they are saying to the Democratic convention—and the argument is one that will be heard more and more as the "draft Roosevelt" movement progresses—is this: Nominate a compromise candidate and even though the President may support him, the chances are large that a sufficient number of Rooseveltians will fall away to give the Republicans the election; nominate an out-and-out conservative and face a bolt that will certainly give them the election; nominate, therefore, out of sheer political expediency, if nothing else, a liberal of the Roosevelt persuasion, who will carry on the New Deal in the Roosevelt tradition.

What of the liberals of this description other than the President himself? The reply is that none of them has the vote-getting possibilities of the President—that even with the third-term handicap he has a better chance of success than any other Democrat now on the political horizon.

This is the idea that the Ickes statement is intended to get across. He sees Mr. Roosevelt as the "one certain answer" to the question of the liberal camp, most surely he nominated and, therefore, elected on the Democratic ticket. He doesn't say what he would do if somebody like former Gov. McNutt or Gov. Stark should be nominated, but he indicates very plainly what he would do, and would like to get others to do. If Mr. Garner should be nominated, (I hasten to add that he names no names; one can only write them in by inference from his known position.)

Mr. Ickes is for a third term for the President, and in his earnest effort to get other candidates—not, perhaps, all of them—out of the way, he is holding a gun at the head of the Democratic convention.

LETTER TO ROOSEVELT
ASSAILS CHIP ROBERT

Congressman Says Farley Ignores Lobbying Charges Against Party Secretary.

WASHINGTON, June 12 (AP).—Representative Martin J. Kennedy (Dem., New York), made public today correspondence to President Roosevelt in which he contended that L. W. Chip Robert, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, "was active in lobbying for certain legislation."

"In view of the drive that Attorney-General Frank Murphy is making against corruption in high places," Kennedy wrote, "it would seem to me that the Democratic National Committee may well be challenged by the Republicans on this lobbying issue, for while Mr. Robert is not an office holder and cannot be considered as having done anything corrupt, at the same time, as secretary of the national committee, his 'unofficial' activities subjects the administration and the party to all sorts of criticism."

"As a result of his party position, he wields a tremendous influence in Democratic legislative circles."

The letter, dated June 10, asserted that a previous communication on this subject from Kennedy to the White House had been referred to Postmaster-General Farley as national party chairman, but that Farley had made no reply.

Kennedy said, therefore, he felt it was his duty to bring the matter to the attention of the President again.

The earlier letter, dated March 8, said Robert was "chief lobbyist" for legislation proposing that Congress rather than the Interstate Commerce Commission, fix railroad freight rates.

TWO OF POISONED NANKING OFFICIALS DIE; 18 MADE ILL

Japanese and Chinese Are Stricken After Drinking Toast in 'Wine to Vice-Minister.'

TOKYO, June 12 (AP).—Two officials of the Japanese Consulate-General in Nanking have died as a result of drinking apparently poisoned wine served at a banquet, the Foreign Office announced today.

SHANGHAI, June 12 (AP).—Japanese authorities searched Nanking today for persons responsible for poisoning wine served at a dinner in the Japanese Consulate General.

Twenty high Japanese and Chinese officials of the Nanking Reformed Government were stricken. A Japanese statement said it "a daring attempt of Chinese enemies of the new administration at wholesale killing of officialdom."

The statement said that following the drinking of the initial toast to the guest of honor (Tameshuro Shimizu, Parliamentary Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs in Tokyo) the entire assemblage was stricken.

Japanese civilian and military physicians hastily were summoned. The statement said, "The brains behind the outrage still are at large, although Nanking is being scoured" for those responsible. The incident happened Saturday night.

Situation at Tientsin.
Japanese reports from Tientsin, meanwhile, said "a tense calm before the storm" prevailed in the North China port where the British concession has been threatened with isolation unless four Chinese there were surrendered to the Japanese.

The four are suspected by the Japanese of killing S. G. Cheng, official of the Japanese-dominated Customs at the port.

Japanese said "the isolating process" was due to start "in a few days" but so far there has been no effort to carry out a reported 48-hour ultimatum which expired last Saturday for turning over the Chinese refugees.

Japanese military officials have declined to confirm that an ultimatum had been issued, but one asserted "strong action" was in prospect unless the British met the Japanese desires.

Japanese said the French concession also might be isolated, if action were taken against the British zone, as the two are adjacent and the British area could not be cut off if the French were open.

Removal of Japanese residents of both concessions was said to have been completed, apparently preparing the way for action by the military, but British showed no uneasiness and hinted a diplomatic settlement might be expected.

Military Situation Little Changed.
On the military side, there have been few changes in the last few days in the Chinese-Japanese war.

In Shantung Province, where heavy Japanese reinforcements were landed at Tsingtao, the Japanese said they were carrying out a sharp offensive inland, where they admitted Chinese troops and guerrillas were putting up stiff resistance.

In one area of Central Shantung the Japanese reported their troops had surrounded 40,000 Chinese soldiers. Japanese planes were carrying out raids throughout the province.

North and south of Hankow, Japanese asserted their troops continued to push back the Chinese, but other sources indicated the invaders were making little progress and in some instances even were falling back before Chinese thrusts.

Financial Difficulties.
Attempting further to maintain the value of the "Federal Reserve Bank notes" in North China originated by the Japanese army, the Japanese military in Chefoo proclaimed that American sailors summing there must exchange their American dollars for the notes at

POLISH AGENT ACCUSED OF DANZIG ESPIONAGE

Inspector Also Charged With Trying to Lure Storm Troopers Into Poland.

FREE CITY OF DANZIG, June 12 (AP).—The Danzig Government announced today it had placed charges of attempted kidnapping and espionage against Jan Henryk Lipinski, Polish Customs Inspector.

The Krakow newspaper Ilustrowany Kurjer said Lipinski was seized in Danzig, taken to the isolated village of Heuburg and beaten into unconsciousness.

Other Polish reports said the inspector was pushed into a police car and told he was being charged with drunkenness, although without cause.

A communique said he represented himself to certain storm troopers as a former reserve officer of the German army and as such tried to obtain military information from them.

The announcement charged Lipinski also attempted to persuade storm troopers with whom he talked to cross the border by automobile into Poland.

The SA men became suspicious, it was said, and when they called the police Lipinski fled into a nearby woods where the police found him. A public trial was promised.

Poland Protests, Says Official Was Beaten Unconscious.
WARSAW, June 12 (AP).—The Polish Commissioner to the Free City of Danzig, Marian Chodacki, was reported to have protested today to authorities against the arrest of Jan Henryk Lipinski, Polish Customs Inspector.

The Krakow newspaper Ilustrowany Kurjer said Lipinski was seized in Danzig, taken to the isolated village of Heuburg and beaten into unconsciousness.

Other Polish reports said the inspector was pushed into a police car and told he was being charged with drunkenness, although without cause.

The action, police explained, was in retaliation for the confiscation in recent days of the quarters of German minorities in Polish Silesia and Olsa territory.

The building was turned over to the district leader of the Hitler Youth for use.

The awards included the Order of Lenin and the Soviet medal for "courage." Kokkinaki, pilot, and Gordenko, navigator, were forced down on Miscou Island, New Brunswick, on a projected flight from Moscow to the New York World's

HOUSE COMMITTEE WANTS ARMY FUND UP $292,000,000

Move Based in Part on Lindbergh's Testimony That U. S. Is 'Far From Top' in Military Aviation

WASHINGTON, June 12 (AP).—The House Appropriations Committee asked Congress today to add $292,000,000 to next year's $508,789,824 War Department appropriation bill to build more army planes, expand the Panama Canal garrison and provide "educational orders" for purchase of war materials.

The committee sent to the House for consideration, probably next week, a measure appropriating $14,250,000 for the educational, or sample, orders, $27,000,000 for Panama and $251,445,547 for 2390 new planes and new housing facilities.

In reporting the bill the committee made public texts of the testimony given at hearings by Major-General Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Col. Lindbergh testified that the United States ranks "far from the top" in military aviation.

Lead Lost Last Five Years.
"A few years ago we led the world in both military and commercial aviation, but during the past five years the lead in military aviation has been taken away from us," Col. Lindbergh said.

"In commercial aviation, I feel that we still hold the leading position, and our lead in that will depend on whether or not we concentrate on commercial aviation in the future, as we have in the past."

He stated briefly that it is true that Europe leads us by a large margin in military aviation while we lead by a large margin in commercial aviation.

Asked how this country stood regarding research, Col. Lindbergh said:

"In the field of applied and basic research, I feel that it will probably take us from three to five years to regain our leading position. . . . We are not behind in quality as applied to workmanship and equipment, but we are behind

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never back sympathetically with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Experience With a Loan Company.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

HE did not get his pound of flesh, but then, Shylock lived in Venice, not in Missouri, where the profits of the automobile finance companies would have made him blush for shame—or envy. These finance companies do not hesitate to collect from 50 to 120 per cent on their small loans, and since the law permits a service charge of 20 on an automobile loan, they can mulct the public of 400 per cent on a $5 loan, charge interest and still recover the principal.

Early in February, I received a cordial letter from one of the finance companies in the downtown section, informing me that I was on their preferred credit list, and enclosing an introductory card which entitled me to special consideration. I got it, and how! I know, of course, that they copied my name from the license list, but it still intrigued my vanity to find that I was on their preferred credit list, and I put my car in hock for $10 the next week, and then began my education.

To obtain the loan of $10, I had to sign a note for $14.90, leaving them with the neat return of 49 per cent for a seven-week period. Nor was this all. In March, after making two payments on the first note, I borrowed an additional $5. To obtain this loan, I signed another note for $22.50 to pay off the balance of $14.40 still due on the first note, and covered the new loan of $5. This gave them a difference of $11.10, and a profit of $6.10 for increasing the loan from $10 to $15, or well over 120 per cent profit on the new note.

However, I'm still not out of the woods. Although I hold receipts for $21.50, I still owe two more payments of $2, which will make a grand total of $25.50 I must pay to make a $15 loan, which gives them close to 80 per cent profit on the entire transaction.

So Missouri, which gave us the famous Missouri compromise, has also given us the law which enables the finance companies to mulct the public for 120 to 130 per cent in the small-loan racket. If St. Louis must have new revenue, why not select some of these rackets that actually collect huge profits from our citizens, such as the small-loan racket? Isn't it time to collect some adequate return in return for these businesses which are not a necessary adjunct to our community, or run them out and make St. Louis a better place to live in?

Urges Tolerance for German People.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
FEW people in the United States approve of Hitler's policies, but I think that entirely too many people associate Hitler and Naziism with the German people.

However, it is gratifying to see that we Americans, who are taught that tolerance is part of our life, realize and appreciate German culture. This is evident by the interest that is shown and the support that is given the many Wagnerian and other German operas and operatic stars we have long enjoyed.

I am sure that this tolerance will afford us more enjoyment and a greater good will and understanding than intolerance and prejudice.

A Plan for Submarine Safety.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
WE have just read of two major disasters in the submarine world, one in our own country and one in England. I would like to make a simple suggestion, which I believe will prevent such horrible experiences.

When building a submarine, attach along each side rescue rings or eyelets strong enough that a tow line could be fastened quickly by a diver from a ship above and hoisted up. Should there be two ships or two boats on one ship, they could attach to a ring on each side and bring the submarine up. There should be strength enough in each ring to stand a pull sufficient to raise the craft.

In order to have strength enough, they would need to be made a part of the heavy frame. The rings could be of a screw type that could be replaced at intervals, as the sea water would weaken the metal.

I think six or eight on each side of a submarine would insure a place to hitch onto, no matter what position it was in. Unless I am badly mistaken, this would save many lives.

In launching a submarine for the first few trial trips, a line could be attached to these rings and to a reel aboard a ship that would accompany it. Should anything happen, the submarine, by giving a signal, could be pulled out at once and not wait for a diver to go down to make a line fast.

The submarines now in service could be equipped with these rescue rings in a short time. Should these rings interfere in any way with the operation, they could be set in the hull and have a spring lid to cover them up, yet easy to open.

An Offer to the British.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
WE are hearing considerable these days about a Roosevelt third term. In the event of his re-election in 1940, which heaven forbid, that fact will have demonstrated, at least to my satisfaction, that we are incapable of further self-government. In that case, I suggest that it may be necessary for the British to take us back. While their Britannic Majesties are visiting over here, it might be well for them to look us over with that thought in mind.

A JOYNT HIDE-OUT.

A vast amount of dirty work has been done at Jefferson City during the last five months, but none of it is dirtier than the outrageous deal by which the Missouri Board of Probation and Parole is to keep secret the recommendations of Judges with respect to parole of prisoners.

The proposal, had it been no more than that, would have been an affront to the people of Missouri. Its adoption by the assembled Circuit Judges is nothing less than a public insult.

Do all the Circuit Judges who have approved the secrecy rule know what they have done? They have joined hands with Judge Joynt of St. Louis, who supported the paroles of Isadore Londe and Buddy Luger, murderous gangsters. No wonder Judge Joynt wants secrecy. No wonder he went to Jefferson City with his motion to keep the names of parole sponsors from public view. His brazen role in the release of two notorious enemies of society has made his name a by-word.

But are all of Missouri's Circuit Judges willing to team up with Judge Joynt? Aren't there Judges who believe that they owe it to the people to shoulder in public their responsibility in the matter of paroles? Aren't there Judges who want to lift this finger of suspicion from the bench? Aren't there Judges who realize that the Federal rule of public notice for parole sponsors, as in the Kattelman case, is sound?

Those who have nothing to hide do not fear the light of day. They do not seek the cover of darkness for their acts. They are willing that their works shall be known among men. Secrecy for the sponsors of paroles can lead to only one end: parole abuses infinitely worse than any now known. It is not too much to say that it would open the way for a scandalous traffic, behind-the-screen buying and selling of releases from prison walls—official corruption at its worst.

Lieutenant-Governor Harris, chairman of the Parole Board, says it will follow the rule of secrecy. What do the people of Missouri say? Do they want secrecy so the Joynts may get the Londes out of prison? An answer so thunderous should roll in on Missouri's Judges that this vicious, cowardly rule will never go into effect.

PROBLEMS OF A PRIME MINISTER.

When a British spokesman expresses England's determination to stop aggression by rallying a united front to the defense of threatened nations, Berlin loses a protest about "encirclement."

On the other hand, when a British spokesman expresses willingness to negotiate on economic and political problems, as Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax did the other day, Berlin's rebuff takes the form of expressing "distress" for the conciliatory gesture.

At the same time, new criticism is heard in London, expressing fear that Downing Street is taking another whirl at "appeasement."

Perhaps all this helps account for that weary and baffled look shown on Mr. Chamberlain's face in recent photographs.

That old and long-missing performer, Competition, returns to make St. Louis a city flowing with milk.

KLIEG LIGHTS ON THE FILM INDUSTRY.

There are indications that the bright lights will soon be playing on the financial side of Hollywood's mystification and make-believe. The Federal Government is going into action shortly on a number of fronts, which have aspects that need to have the official klieg lights turned on.

An anti-trust suit against all the major producing companies and combinations of exhibitors has been pending for some time in New York City. Now, Assistant Attorney-General Thurman Arnold is preparing a new series of suits, in virtually every judicial district, directed against alleged monopolistic practices of the theater chains.

A highly significant angle of the new inquiry concerns the relations between the powerful movie machine operators' union and exhibitors. Big companies have used this union to bring pressure upon independent exhibitors, it is alleged, and the inquiry has extended to St. Louis, where FBI men have looked into the activities of John Nick and Clyde Weston, ousted dictators of the local union.

Sensor Neely, pressing the long fight for elimination of block booking and blind selling, also has taken a hand in the clean-up campaign. In a lengthy report by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, he includes the statement that eight major companies exercise a monopoly in the industry, and are able, by means of their selling policies, to dominate exhibitors and dictate the choice of film programs.

Another inquiry now under way is into alleged income tax evasion by several major film executives. The motion picture industry has so broad a cultural and educational influence that its operations are of great public concern. It is high time that its questionable practices were plumbed to the bottom and corrected. One immediate effect of the Government's activities should be passage by Congress of the legislation urged by Senator Neely.

TURN OFF THE LOAFERS.

If Mayor Dickmann and the Board of Aldermen expect the citizens to be reconciled to the $1,000,000 annual increase in city taxes voted recently, they will have to see that the money is well spent. The wisdom of cutting the deadheads off the city payroll should be more evident than ever. The people do not want to see the extra pennies they must pay for cigarettes used as political pay for wardhealers.

Proof that the payroll contains numerous stipendiaries who serve no useful function was provided the other day. Director of Public Safety Chadsey closed the City Hall restaurant after 2 p. m. in order to keep city employees from congregating there to drink beer and listen to the baseball broadcast.

While the committeemen and committee women cluster up the City Hall corridors, many of the service departments are woefully undermanned. City Hospital, for example, continues to have less than two-fifths the number of nurses required to satisfy accepted standards. After drastic complaints from the medical staff last winter, 46 additional nurses were promised, but they have not been supplied.

A complete study of the personnel of the various city departments is being made by the Governmental Research Institute. But this report is not due for six or seven months. Meanwhile, there are spots where the political parasites are so thick that no expert is required to detect them.

Get rid of the deadheads, Mr. Mayor! The taxpayers want service for their money.

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE ROYAL VISIT.

The four-day royal visit is ended, and the British sovereigns have seen and been seen by millions of their hosts, with mutual approval. The amazing Roosevelt has again demonstrated their capacities, for the series of entertainments, from elaborate state dinner to hot-dog picnic, went off as smoothly as could be wished. King George and Queen Elizabeth have left an impression as a pleasant and gracious young pair, custodian of the domestic virtues which Queen Victoria made the supreme requirement of British rulers, and in addition of an easy adaptability of which the royal matriarch perhaps never dreamed.

There will, of course, be speculation galore as to the political purposes and the political results of the royal visit. The alarmists' cries that George and Elizabeth were sent over here to bring back a military alliance are, of course, fantastic. A healthy skepticism over the course of European statesmanship prevails in America, which our people's natural hospitality and their bond with the former mother country's culture and institutions does not overcome. Nevertheless, it remains true that the rulers of no other country could have won such an exuberant reception as that accorded the British visitors.

America held the balance of power in the last war, and doubt as to our future attitude is a large item in deterring the aggressor Powers from precipitating the next one. Europe sees far more significance in state journeys than do Americans, so the reception of the British visitors here has been scrutinized carefully by all the chancelleries abroad. Nazi trepidation over the possible consequences has been plainly disclosed by the sour notes sounded unanimously by the German controlled press, and Britain's delight by the enthusiastic reports of the American reception.

America, however remote from Europe's quarrels, has a stake in the struggle now under way. A Fascist triumph would be an undoubted menace to all our institutions. Hence the general acceptance of Mr. Roosevelt's policy of giving support to the anti-aggressor bloc by "methods short of war." Hence the growing popular pressure for revision of the Neutrality Act, so that the present provisions shall not hamstring legitimate American support, by means of cash-and-carry sales of arms and supplies, to Britain and France in the event of war.

The royal visit was a dramatization of neighborliness. The enthusiastic reception does not invalidate our people's determination to avoid European involvements, but it does underscore the need for Neutrality Act revision, so that the nations that are our virtual first line of defense may be strengthened to meet the test, if it comes.

Lost, also, in the Pandergast shuffle is ex-City Manager McElroy's overworked wisecracker.

A BROADER HOUSECLEANING NEEDED.

The housecleaning in the local Motion Picture Machine Operators' Union, long dominated by the strong-arm methods of Czar John P. Nick, was carried a step farther by yesterday's vote of the Central Trades and Labor Union to approve a new election of officers by secret ballot of the union's members. At the same time, the need for a housecleaning in the international union was demonstrated by the fight of Arthur Lyday, its representative, against this democratic procedure.

While Lyday sought to block this effort to rid the union of a leadership discredited by the membership, the courts and public opinion, he had the effrontery to prate of the international's "democratic principles." The international's head is George E. Browne, a creature of the indicted Czar Nick. Now that the Nick outfit is being purged from the local ranks, is it not time for the union's membership over the nation to throw out its misleaders at national headquarters as well? Secretary William M. Brandt of Central Trades has fought a good fight in helping rid St. Louis labor of Nick's sinister influence. Another task is now cut out for him and the rank and file of decent labor men.

As they gasped in that witting Washington weather, the shades of the Founding Fathers may have wondered why they didn't choose another site for the capital city. For example, salubrious St. Louis.

THE SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS.

If the Senate concurs in the House amendments to the Social Security Act, as is expected, this important New Deal reform measure will be greatly improved. A three-year delay in raising the old-age annuity tax on employers and employees will go far toward doing away with the unwieldy reserve provided for under the existing law. By halting the drain of funds from the consumption stream, it should aid in bringing about recovery. Both these ends will be served also by the liberalization of the benefits to be paid the insured.

The payment of annuities will begin in 1940 instead of 1942, and the amount will be increased. The amendment also provides for the payment of benefits to elderly widows, parents and minor children of the insured, instead of calling for the disbursement of a lump sum to the heirs.

More than a million additional persons—seamen, bank employees and persons over 65—are brought into the system under the amendment. Yet some 6,000,000 domestic servants, farm laborers and white collar workers, who are on the whole the worst underprivileged of our population, are still excluded from the plan, except as they are provided for by the non-contributory phases. Here is a problem which calls for serious study by the Social Security Board.

Dependent children are due to receive a needed boost in the ratio of Federal aid to state appropriations. The maximum Federal contribution for old-age assistance is due to be increased from $15 to $20 a month. This, of course, is a change which Missouri will hardly be in position to take advantage of until the chadders and chislers have been purged from the rolls and available State funds have been reserved for aged persons actually without resources for their own support.

We are not impressed by the report that the King stopped the stock market. But what a hit George would have made if he'd started it going full blast!

"I'LL GET THAT KILLER!"

What Holds Building Back?

The Mirror
Public Opinion

Construction slump is caused by restraints of trade in every level of industry, Assistant Attorney-General says; monopolistic devices are used by material producers, contractors and labor; thinks enforcing present laws can bring costs down to a reasonable level.

From an Address by Thurman W. Arnold, United States Assistant Attorney-General in Charge of Anti-Trust Prosecutions.

THE building industries are unique in that they have frankly given up half of their job. They take for granted that it is impossible, as things are today, for them to build houses without public aid and sell them cheaply enough that the lowest-paid half of the population can afford to live in them.

This has been true for four reasons: financing costs were high, taxes were high, land was high and the costs of construction were high. Recently, a broad Federal and state program has undertaken to provide adequate cheap credit and even subsidies. But the easing of this difficulty has afforded an opportunity for costs of construction to go still higher.

During the latter half of 1936 and the beginning of 1937, students of housing believed the long-delayed revival of building was at last at hand. Building contracts rose by the month. But building costs rose at the same time and choked the revival.

A number of our large cities, the rise of building costs was more than 25 per cent. The collapse of construction followed and contributed much to the recession in 1937. Unreasonable restraints of trade are, in my opinion, the most conspicuous reason for high construction costs. They appear at every level of the building industry.

Producers of building materials have fixed prices either by private arrangement or as the principal activity of trade associations. Owners of patents on building materials have used them to establish restrictive structures of price control, control of sales methods and limits upon the quantities sold, in direct contradiction of the broad intent of the patent laws.

Supplementing these devices for keeping the prices of building materials high have been a series of other devices used to discipline competitors who are unwilling to play ball. In one industry, the means is cutting off the supply of raw materials. In another, it is starting a series of harassing lawsuits.

In a third, it is harassment of distributors by selling through the seller's own factory branches at prices lower than those at which the distributor is permitted to resell.

Various groups of distributors of building materials engage in two kinds of restrictive practice. First, they try to raise the price of their services by establishing a fixed markup between the price they pay the manufacturer and the price at which they resell. They sometimes agree among themselves to boycott manufacturers who will not cut off supplies from price-cutting distributors.

The second type of restraint by distributors arises from the effort to see to it that all business passes through their hands and that no new methods of distribution are introduced which may dispense with their services. The great weapon in this field is the boycott. Groups of wholesale distributors may boycott those who sell direct to retailers. Groups of retailers may boycott those who sell direct to mail order houses or direct to the ultimate consumers.

Corrupters of Government

From the Springfield (O.) News.

ALWAYS, where bad government is a partnership of politics and crime is found. When laws restraining graft and crime go unenforced, the sure politics is somewhere paid for winking at the law.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch prints a list of the insurance companies doing business in Missouri which put up the huge bribe which Pandergast was paid to save nearly $8,000,000 owed by them to the people of the State. Companies of national known names, headed by men of high repute in the business and social world, contributed to the bribe fund in amounts named by the Post-Dispatch.

Bad government in this case was an alliance between respectable business men and corrupt politicians. There's the strangest, most baffling thing about bad government—so often it is a partnership between business and politics.

Too often, as in the Missouri insurance case, the "slush fund" is amassed, not by "vice," but by men in legitimate business but seeking illegitimate gains.

"MUSIC HATH CHARMS"

From the Bridgeport (Conn.) Times-Star.

"THE most appreciative musical audience I ever encountered in America," declares Jose Iturbi, noted pianist and orchestral director, "was in a Connecticut lunch wagon where I had stopped for a moment. There was a good deal of clapping until the Sunday evening symphonic program went on the air. Then the counterpane stopped washing dishes and listened. The man next to me set his cup down very carefully, the waitress stopped stacking dishes—and listened."

"By that time the place was comparatively quiet, but the counterpane scowled at four hamburgers sizzling on the grill and carefully removed them. This gave the waitress an idea. She went to the end of the lunch wagon and took down a duck. The silence was complete."

"The incident was a more profound tribute to the power of good music than the applause of many a more cosmopolitan group of music lovers."

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR THE BUSES

From the Detroit Free Press.

THE April passenger report issued by the Department of Street Railways shows that buses carried 63.5 per cent more passengers than in April, 1938. Street cars carried 9.17 per cent fewer passengers in the same period. An increase in revenue and 12.02 per cent increase in the total number of passengers reflect the obvious value of bus service.

Here is a plain statement of the preference for buses and the benefits to be obtained from their use. Interurban travel has long since disappeared from the highways.

NEW DEAL EXTORTION ASSAILED BY

He Denies Rights of Greater Than Own Property.

BOSTON, June 12 (AP)—London, former Governor of Massachusetts and unsuccessful candidate in the last election, today asserted Deal's attitude that "the users are greater than the owners of the rights of the owners of the property" is identical with "the rights of the owners of the property."

London, addressing a class of Boston University students, declared that "in actual government today, the rights of the users are made superior to the rights of the owner."

"We old 'Bolsheviks' of who were called Socialists because we believe in the rights of the users in relation to the owners are now in the 'reactionary' because still standing our middle between the two extremes."

"Today," declared London, "the makers and moulders of economic theory for the American people are now in the hands of the administration, believe in the rights of the users and the rights of the owner have gone back to the cry of the Populists. But is the theory limited to 'This belief is also the belief of the Fascist, Communist government. The property rights in Germany or Russia, that are superior rights of the Government."

The "resulting uncertainty," he said, "is causing men anything to invest in their plans for today or the future."

The reason for this uncertainty he expressed in a thousand words, but they all wind up in question, property rights.

Not far from the old "No New Deal" slogan is going to begin in '40 the old traditions," London said.

"They make a mistake talking liberty and freedom, abstract, to men and women who are now in a world which is sustaining power of the That's just as foolish as by the other side, to forces which make business, it is an indefensible defense of criminal recklessness in national finance; and as our national policy bribery, making the trade his vote for a dollar."

"The moderate, middle road position cannot be defended. It is sneered at the relinching extremists, and not going to find the pace a party that we all crave, large enough group in the of the road says to the ex on either side: 'A plague your houses.'"

NEW DEAL EXTREMES ASSAILED BY LONDON

He Denies Rights of Users Are Greater Than Owners of Property.

BOSTON, June 12 (AP).—Al M. Landon, former Governor of Kansas and unsuccessful Republican candidate in the last presidential election, today assailed the New Deal's attitude that "the rights of the users are greater than the rights of the owners of property" is identical with the belief of the Fascist and Communist governments.

Landon, addressing the graduating class of Boston University, declared that "in actual practice of government today, the rights of the users are made superior to the rights of the owner."

"We old Bolsheviks of 1912, who were called Socialists and radicals because we believed that the rights of the users must be considered in relation to the rights of the owners, are now in 1939 classed as 'reactionary,' because we are still standing our middle ground between the two extremes."

Battle Cry of Populists.

"Today," declared Landon, "the economic theory for the American people, the 'New Deal' of the present administration, believe that the rights of the users are greater than the rights of the owners. They have gone back to the old battle cry of the Populists. But the next day the theory limited to the land."

"This belief is also identical with the belief of the Fascist and Communist governments. There are no property rights in Germany, Italy or Russia, that are superior to the rights of the Government."

The "resulting uncertainty," Landon said, "is causing men who have anything to invest, to hesitate in their plans for today or tomorrow. The reason for this uncertainty may be expressed in a thousand ways, but they all wind up in the one question, property rights."

Not for Restoring Old Order.

"No group is making a greater mistake than those who think life is going to begin again by restoring old traditions," Landon continued. "They make a mistake by talking liberty and freedom in the abstract, to men and women inadequately cared for in material things, in a world which disregards the sustaining power of the spiritual. That's just as foolish as refusal by the other side, to consider the forces which make business operate. It is as indefensible as the defense of a criminal's recklessness in national financial and just as wicked as our national policy of political bribery, making the poor man trade his vote for a dollar."

The moderate, middle of the road position cannot be dramatized, in fact, it is sneered at by the unremitting extremists. Yet we are not going to find the pace and prosperity that we all crave, until a large enough group in the middle of the road says to the extremists on either side: 'A plague o' both your houses.'

ONLY ONE OF 398 AT HEALTH CAMP GETS TUBERCULOSIS

Jewish Sanatorium to Put 32 Children Through Prevention Program This Year.

Children selected for the camp, on Fee Fee road, St. Louis County, are the poorly nourished, those suspected of tuberculosis and those who have been exposed to the disease, she said. The campers wear only loin cloths, are fed high-calorie diet and receive constant medical supervision. Thirty-two children will spend this summer at the camp.

MUSICAL OPERA SINGER WEBS DECATUR, ILL., DANCER

Easterling met his wife when they were co-directors of the dance department of the Milliken Conservatory of Music at Decatur last winter. She is the daughter of George Flinn of Decatur.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR THE BUS

EE April passenger report issued by the Department of Street Railways shows buses carried 63.5 per cent more passengers than in April, 1938. Street cars carried 8.7 per cent fewer passengers in the same period. An increase in revenue of 10 per cent increase in the total number of passengers reflect the obvious value of service.

There is a plain statement of the preference for buses and the benefits to be gained from their use. Interurban traffic has long since disappeared from the highways.

Now long must it be before Detroit, the city of the United States, ride the tide-laden thoroughfares of rattling trolleys, grinding and screeching along tracks?

6000 AT CELEBRATION OF CHURCH CENTENNIAL

Trinity Lutheran Anniversary Observed at Services in Municipal Auditorium.

The centennial of the founding of Trinity Lutheran Church, Eighth and Soudard streets, was celebrated yesterday at services in the Municipal Auditorium, attended by about 6000 persons.

Among those taking part in the services were 500 delegates from Missouri, Arkansas and Tennessee to the Western District convention of the Lutheran church, being held at Concordia Seminary. The sermon was by the Rev. J. W. Behnken, president of the Lutheran Missouri Synod.

Trinity church was founded in the spring of 1839 by a group who had come to St. Louis from Germany expressly to establish a Lutheran colony. It has played a prominent part in the history of the church in this area. Members of the congregation financed publication of the Lutheran, a church journal, and prepared a hymn book which still is used in the Missouri Synod.

The Rev. Rudolph H. C. Meyer has been pastor of the church since 1925.

About 250 congregations are represented at the Western District convention at St. Louis, a meeting, which began last Saturday and will continue through Thursday. A service for young people in connection with the sessions will be held tomorrow evening on the seminary campus, 801 De Mun avenue, Clayton.

15-COUNTRY EUROPEAN TOUR AT COST OF $650

St. Louis Lawyer, Using Youth Hostels, Makes Money Go Thousands of Miles.

Fred Schuler, a young lawyer, has returned to his home in St. Louis after a year in Europe and North Africa—a year in which he covered thousands of miles and visited 15 countries, all at a cost of $650. Youth hostels, at which he paid 2 to 25 cents for a night's lodging, helped him to travel cheaply.

Following his graduation from the Washington University School of Law last June and after he passed the State bar examination, he decided he wanted to see Europe. He left in July, expecting to spend four months abroad. When he found that his money went so far, he stayed on. He hitch-hiked, traveled mostly by bicycle and third class on boat trips.

Schuler, who is 24 years old, lives with his mother at 6101A Clayton avenue. He told a Post-Dispatch reporter he spent most of his time in France, Germany and England arguing politics. "In Germany I was arrested for a few days because I converted me to Nazism, from the youngest kid on up," he said. "They're always trying to sell you I got fed up with their regimentation twice and left Germany, then went back a third time to have another look."

Mistaken for a German.

Of German ancestry and rather Teutonic looking, with straw blond hair and gray eyes, Schuler was mistaken for a German and ordered out of Yugoslavia after a week because the police thought he was a refugee. That was his only scrape with political authorities. Schuler speaks German and learned French in Paris, thereafter finding little trouble making himself understood. In the hostels, many of which were old castles, he cooked his own meals. He carried a sleeping bag and sheets, renting blankets from the hostels.

To reach Algeria he bought deck space on a boat for $4.70 for a 470-mile trip from Marseilles. It was cold on the Sahara Desert in January, so he returned quickly to Paris.

He was in Paris during the September crisis. The streets were deserted and he was certain, with other Americans, that war would come. Americans who had lived in Paris assured them, however, there had been other crises without war. When it didn't come, Schuler felt a little let down.

Most of his expenses were in the first three months when he traveled by train, bought a motorcycle, ate in restaurants. When he started hosting, his living expenses dropped to 40 cents a day in the Balkans and about 70 cents when he was traveling there. In Greece he spent more on postage stamps to write home than for food. His visa to get in Greece cost as much as living in that country for a week.

Paris His Headquarters.

After leaving most of his luggage in Paris, he traveled about with a leather jacket, two pairs of trousers, heavy wool socks, two shirts, which he washed each night, two sweaters and a pair of brogues. He had no hat or overcoat. His shoes were repaired nine times in 11 months.

Lodging cost 2 cents a night in Czechoslovakian hostels, 4 cents in Hungary, 4 1/2 cents in Yugoslavia, 7 in Germany, 11 in France, 12 in Belgium and 23 cents in Switzerland, England and Scotland.

His chief regret was that he bought a round-trip ticket to Scotland.

Traveling Cheap

land, which, incidentally, cost only $186, including a free thousand-mile trip by railroad and boat to France, which was thrown in. He thinks it might have been cheaper to go on around the world than to return to New York.

'QUEEN HIGH' TONIGHT AT MUNICIPAL OPERA

Hazel Hayes Heads Cast for Musical Farce, Brought Up to Date.

"Queen High," a musical farce from the 1920's about two partners in a garter company, will open at the Municipal Theater in Forest Park at 8:15 o'clock tonight as the second production of the season.

A large cast of principals, headed by comedians and dancers, has been assembled for the show. The book, originally by Laurence Schwab, who did the directing here for a few years, and B. G. De Sylva, has been doctored to give the story a contemporary setting.

It will be the first presentation of "Queen High" at the Municipal Theater. Originally produced in New York in 1928, its only other St. Louis production was at the old Garden Theater in 1923.

Hazel Hayes, a soprano from the radio and operatic stage, will head the cast and make her St. Louis debut. She will be supported by Billy House, who plays Laurence Baxter, Doris Patson, Melissa Mason, Duke McHale, Earl Oxford and Una Val Castle.

The story of "Queen High" is based on a farce originally known as "A Pair of Sixes." It centers about two partners who are known as "Queen High" and "The King of the Road." The story is about being boss of the company. They settle their differences with a poker game. Songs from the show include "Cross Your Heart," "Don't Forget," "You'll Never Know," "Beautiful Baby" and "Everything Happens for the Best." An audience of 7900 saw the final production of "Rose Marie" last night, making a total attendance of $3,000 for the 10 performances.

UNDERGROUND PASSAGE FROM FRANCE TO BELGIUM FOUND

French Police Believe Old Chateau Was Used by Spy Ring; Two Men and Woman Arrested. VALENCIENNES, France, June 12 (AP).—Police reported today the discovery of an underground railway linking Belgium with France in the old chateau Mont de Perwez, on the French side of the frontier, which they said apparently was used by an espionage ring to get military secrets out of France.

Two men and a woman found in the chateau, where a secret passage led to an underground passage to Belgium, were held on charges of espionage and smuggling. The woman, of Spanish extraction, said she was Carmen Olivares, a singer. The men were Raymond Monteyne, a Frenchman, and Violeta Piesbrock, an Italian, both of whom police said had previous records as smugglers.

U. S. PROTESTS TO JAPAN OVER RAID ON MISSION

Points Out Attack at Laying Was Seventh Bombing of American Church Property in May.

PEIPING, China, June 10 (delayed) (AP).—The United States protested today to the Japanese embassy against the bombing May 24 of the American Southern Baptist mission at Laying, in North China's Shantung Province, by a Japanese seaplane.

It was pointed out that this was the seventh Japanese bombing of American mission property during May. Nine such incidents were reported in March and four in April. Reports of the Laying bombing said one missile exploded 20 feet outside the mission compound wall, blowing out doors and windows of the foreign residence. No foreign casualties were reported.

The Rev. Herbert C. Meyer of the American Evangelical Lutheran Mission at Enshih, in Southwestern Hupeh Province, reported the mission's school and church razed by Japanese bombers in a raid on June 7.

Lieut. John Cooper, British assistant military attaché, released after being held by Japanese soldiers at Kalgan, returned here apparently in good health.

The British embassy made public the text of a statement signed by Cooper before his release from Kalgan.

"I apologize for entering the Kalgan war zone without a military pass," it said, "and shall never knowingly commit the same error in the future in any Japanese war zone in China. Any information I may have got since May 25 concerning the Kalgan war zone will never be transmitted to the Chinese side."

Cooper has been a captive since May 26, when he was arrested with Lieutenant-Colonel C. R. Spear, British military attaché, Spear reported to be charged with collecting military information inside Japanese zones, still was detained. Japanese delivered a counter protest to the British over the incident, declaring "travel within the Japanese-occupied zone without permission was illegal" and the defense measures taken are only natural.

They threatened to prevent the circulation of the sailors' United States money if they declined to obey the order.

Chefoo, however, long has been preparing for a period of prosperity with the influx of the sailors and was not expected to aid in fulfilling the edict.

Americans also believed the sailors would prove themselves capable of obtaining full value for their dollars.

Two Foreign Teachers Hurt in Bombing of School at Chengtu, CHUNGKING, China, June 12 (AP).—Semi-official Chinese reports said today that Japanese bombers damaged property of the West China Union University and injured two of its foreign teachers at Chengtu, 173 miles northwest of Chungking.

The university combines United States, Canadian and British educational efforts and now is host to several missionary universities from Eastern China.

A bomb injured the president of Nanking University, re-established in Chengtu.

Other bombs hit the American Baptist School and demolished the residence of a missionary.

Other meager reports from Chengtu, capital of Szechwan Province, in which is this wartime capital, asserted Chinese pursuit planes and anti-aircraft guns shot down three Japanese war planes. Some of the strongest Chinese air units are based at Chengtu.

(A dispatch from Shanghai said the Japanese air raiders shot down six Chinese airplanes at Chengtu and Chungking. Japanese naval reports were that heavy property damage was caused by bombs in both cities.)

One hundred casualties were inflicted here last night by 150 Japanese bombs, one-fourth of which were dud.

The Mexican Legation and German Embassy were damaged in the attack, but no diplomat was hurt.

ACTION ON RURAL ELECTRIC SERVICE STILL EXPECTED

Senator Roberson Is Said to Plan to Call Missouri Legislative Committee Together.

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 201-205 Kellogg Building. WASHINGTON, June 12.—The prospect of imminent action on the rural electrification bill pending in the Missouri Legislature was indicated in a telegram sent Saturday by John M. Carmody, administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration, to Senator Charles O. Roberson of Rockport, Mo., chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the State Senate.

The bill, which seeks to strengthen opportunities for the organization of electric service co-operatives, passed the House unanimously, but was held up in the Agricultural Committee of the Senate. The notion in Washington was that Roberson was blocking the bill by refusing to call his committee in session.

Carmody, on June 7, dispatched a wire to Gov. Stark urging him to use his influence to get the measure out of committee. Roberson, according to information here, obtained a copy of the telegram and replied with a biting message to Carmody.

Prompt Action Expected. Several dispatches appear to have been exchanged, with Roberson finally agreeing to call his committee together. In Saturday's reply, Carmody charges that the difficulties "appear to have been exaggerated for everybody by the persistent activity of the utility interests against this bill."

The letter follows: "I am glad to have your forthright telegram about pending electric service co-operative legislation, and also to learn that follow-up."

ing a request of Missouri friends of rural electrification you are calling a meeting of your committee.

Activity of Utilities. "All of us know that action on this enabling legislation means a great deal to Missouri farmers, whom we have a mandate to serve to the full extent that the State makes it possible to serve them. I recognize the difficulties any Senator, and particularly a committee chairman, is under in the closing days of a session. Unfortunately, these difficulties appear to have been aggravated for all of us by the persistent activity of the utility interests against this bill.

"I hope that the constructive action you have taken will make it possible for the Legislature to determine soon, for the farmers and the REA, the conditions under which we may take electricity to the unserved farms of your State.

"If I have done you any injustice personally, or as a committee chairman, I regret it exceedingly. My only interest is to keep the track clear and to do the best job humanly possible under such laws as your Legislature provides. The legislative decision is, of course, a matter for Missouri, and I will be wholly content with, and will be governed by, any decision they reach now through the democratic process."

There was speculation in the quarters of the Italian-Spanish military that an outgrowth of the visit of Generalissimo Franco, the Italian leader, would be such a tie-up.

Madrid newspapers reported that Generalissimo Franco would visit Spain and suggested the possibility that Spain might join Italy in a similar to the political and military alliance between Rome and Berlin.

Addressing 3200 Spanish soldiers who marched in last week's parade here, Pope Pius XII said: "The pontiff said: 'Our thoughts reverently to the compatriots who died in combat and our hearts are moved by the thought of so many generous mothers and many orphan children.'"

"Tell them to unite their thoughts with those of Our Lady of Sorrows and offer them to God with an act of resignation for the peace of the world."

The pontiff showed the soldiers a which he held the sword, extending a hand for them to pass it among them. He said he does not do that, giving so large a group.

Addressing the soldiers, he said: "Welcome, leaders, officers, soldiers of Catholic Spain, my beloved sons, who bring to heart of your father an immense consolation because you are the defenders of the faith and the defenders of your fatherland which you have given so much."

"As we told you in our message, you have made sacrifice to the point of heroism and the cause of God and religion and you have covered your glory fighting valiantly for your dear fatherland with courage."

"We recall that hour of bitter the crumbling fatherland, temples were deprived of the Christ. Spain without roses would no longer be the chivalrous and Christian Spain."

The soldiers, wearing khaki uniforms and holding tasseled caps, cheered the Holy Father entered and knelt as he among them.

The Spaniards arrived in June 5 with 20,000 Italian troops. Two days later they marched with 3000 of the Italians before the Duce in Rome.

Madrid Reports Say Ciano May Result in New Tie. MADRID, June 12 (AP).—Newspapers reported yesterday that Italian Foreign Minister Ciano would visit Gen. Francisco Franco soon.

The possibility of a similar agreement between Spain and Italy in a political and military accord similar to the one between Rome and Berlin.

Reports that Count Ciano would come to Spain to meet Franco, which said his conversation with Franco "may resolve a military accord between the two nations."

They also suggested the possibility of a similar agreement between Spain and Italy in a political and military accord similar to the one between Rome and Berlin.

Spain repeatedly has demanded close friendship with Italy, Germany, and in both of the nations these now are Spaniards which accompanied the Spaniards returning from the war.

Spaniards were agreed, but Generalissimo Franco was very slowly before coming to a very slow agreement for military aid.

The nationalist leader, General Franco, is now in Spain already is aligned with Germany and Italy through the anti-Comintern pact, whose signatories are Japan, Italy and Manchoukuo.

The Spanish press and radio made much last week of the visit of Franco to Rome and Interior Minister, Ciano and Italian and Spanish officials of the "indissoluble friendship" between Spain and Italy.

Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llana, among those who has declared that if a war came Spain would fight beside Italy and other nations which helped Spain.

Spaniards pointed out, however, the final judge is General Franco, who has declared that Spain is not interested in peace and intends to continue with a strong arm to assure this objective.

HALIFAX ASSERTS 'FORCE MUST BE MET WITH FORCE'

In response to a question as to what he considered essentials for a successful conference and what action the Government was taking to prepare ground for one.

"In the opinion of His Majesty's Government," Chamberlain answered, "a world conference could only succeed if accompanied by a general feeling of confidence that all participating governments sincerely desired this settlement and intended to keep both to the spirit and letter any pledge or undertaking given as the result of a conference."

Others Must Make Effort.

"His Majesty's Government will always do their best to promote such a spirit of confidence which can only succeed if other governments make like efforts."

Chamberlain said he had nothing to add to his statement last Wednesday on British-Soviet Russian mutual assistance negotiations beyond the departure for Moscow today of William Strang as a special envoy.

"Does not the Prime Minister realize that these very long delays are causing disquiet in the country?" asked Laborite Hugh Dalton, "and doubt as to whether the Government really means business in this matter?"

Arnot the Government's spinning out time until they can wriggle back to a Munich policy?"

Chamberlain, jumping to his feet, retorted that Dalton was "very offensive in his suggestion" and declared he could "see no reason why the delay should be attributed to His Majesty's Government."

Conservative members cheered the Prime Minister.

The British Government outlined to Ivan Maisky, Soviet Russian Ambassador to London, today a new formula which was being sent to Moscow in the hope of ending a long-standing deadlock over a proposed British-French-Russian mutual assistance pact.

Strang took to Moscow an offer of automatic mutual aid if Britain, France or the Soviet Union were threatened. No mention, it was believed, would be made of the Baltic states, for which Russia wants assistance guarantees, but the British Government was said to believe such an offer would include them also.

HOUSE COMMITTEE WANTS ARMY FUND UP $292,000,000

In quality as applied to the performance of military aircraft."

Colonel Lindbergh termed "very conservative" present plans for increasing the strength of the air corps.

"I do not believe it is either practicable or advisable for this country to attempt to compete with Europe in the quantity production of military aircraft under present conditions," he added.

"It would, in my opinion, be an error to reduce the number of planes called for in the expansion program of the Army Air Corps, unless it is necessary to make a slight reduction in quantity in order to obtain an improvement in quality."

Colonel Lindbergh and General Arnold testified in connection with President Roosevelt's request for $292,000,000 to complete the proposed air corps expansion to 5500 planes. Congress already has voted $50,000,000 toward that purpose, and Arnold disclosed 571 planes had been ordered with the money, including 524 Curtiss pursuit ships which it was learned would have speeds of more than 400 miles an hour.

Gen. Arnold told the committee that the Air Corps current expansion would provide adequate aerial defense for the United States, despite superiority of some German war planes. All this country needs to do, he said, is to build pursuit ships which can fly faster than any foreign bombers. That is being done, he added.

Although acknowledging that some foreign countries had better small planes on hand or being developed, General Arnold told the committee that the United States four-motored "flying fortresses" were unsurpassed in the world.

To overcome the deficiency in pursuit planes and keep ahead of aircraft of other powers in military aviation, he said the Government should spend at least $20,000,000 annually over the next five years for fundamental and applied aeronautical research. He pointed out that Germany has five huge research plants while this country has only one.

Although it recommended appropriation of $120,000,000 for new aircraft, the committee suggested that only 1007 were actually needed immediately.

"While the committee is proposing to underwrite the budget estimate of $292,000,000 for the procurement of planes," the report said, "it has joined to the appropriation a provision making the procurement of 1283 planes subject to the President's determination of their immediate need in the interest of national defense."

President Roosevelt twice has recommended the full program and there appeared little doubt that he would authorize use of the entire fund.

The bill calls for 2290 regular army planes and 177 for the National Guard. These, plus serviceable planes on hand or on order and plus 784 planes the regular War Department appropriation bill provided for, would provide a total of 3550 planes by July, 1941.

The $251,445,547 total for Air Corps expansion includes a $61,600,000 appropriation for housing and Air Corps technical construction at new bases and depots, as well as improvement of existing stations.

It is not intended now to build any permanent barracks, the committee said, except in Hawaii, the Canal Zone, Alaska, Ogden, Utah, and in Southeastern United States.

Completion of the Chanute Field, Ill., air corps technical school at a cost of $2,797,800 was recommended in the bill, which also would provide $1,586,000 for the Savannah ordnance depot in Illinois.

War Department officials told the committee the Panama Canal appropriation would be used to increase the size of the garrisons from 3516 enlisted men to 9916 at a cost of about $3,600,000 and to construct housing facilities, storehouses and the like at a cost of $23,400,000.

The committee said the educational orders would familiarize private manufacturers with production of munitions of war of "special or technical design, non-commercial in character."

TREASURY'S GOLD HOARD PASSES $16,000,000,000

U. S. Now Has 60 Pct. of World's Supply; Increase of Billion in 3 Months.

WASHINGTON, June 12 (AP).—The Treasury reported today its gold holdings passed $16,000,000,000 on June 9.

Representing an increase of $1,000,000,000 in less than three months, the Treasury gold hoard now is not only the largest in the world but represents 60 per cent of all the monetary gold in the world.

The spring rush of gold to this country came after Germany's repudiation of the Czechoslovak republic, with attendant war scares. From a peak of more than $200,000,000 a week, it now has slackened to about $25,000,000 a week.

The Treasury's gold—no one else in this country is permitted to own monetary gold—is stored in a subterranean vault at Fort Knox, Ky., the Federal Reserve and mint vaults at New York and San Francisco and in other strong boxes.

Case Records of a PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Of Northwestern University

CASE M-135: Jane W., aged 19, is a college sophomore. "I have always wanted to be a writer," she timidly confessed. "In high school I had one of my poems published in the yearbook. Here at college my grades have been high in English, but editors don't seem to like my verse and short stories."

"Dr. Crane, could you give me some advice to help me become a successful writer? It seems I cannot do anything unless I get an inspiration, and my poems and stories are all about love."

DIAGNOSIS: It is typical of shy, introverts like Jane to crave a literary career. There are probably 10,000,000 Americans who aspire to become famous by means of literary output. Unfortunately, an introverted life is not conducive to success in writing. It is the extrovert who mingles easily with people and knows the social customs and peculiarities of people. But the extreme extrovert becomes so fond of people that he, in turn, refuses to tear himself away from them long enough to pound the typewriter.

In fact, salesmen, who are typical extroverts as a rule, will dread to send in their daily or weekly reports, simply because they dislike sitting down at a desk and writing. Sales managers nowadays have finally resorted to printed forms which their men can simply fill in with a few minutes of work.

IT IS AN axiom of writing that you must know whereof you speak. A girl whose love affairs have always been one-sided and who is so timid she has been a wallflower for 19 years, cannot hope to write convincing love scenes. Her dialogues will be unnatural and usually too saccharine. Writing is a common sublimation or outlet for love, as witness the poetry writing in those at the puppy love stage. Happy marriage usually kills such literary effusions.

It is well that those who aspire to a literary career force themselves into social affairs and human contacts, so they can understand applied psychology. The secret of successful writing involves a good understanding of your people. Your college grades in English and the five-syllable words you employ so glibly may actually work against literary success. Those who are doing the writing of the world have seldom been professors of English. There are thousands of such teachers in our American high schools and colleges yet very few of them can write salable fiction, essays or poetry. Why?

Because they are quite introverted and unacquainted with applied psychology. They know how to spell and parse a sentence. They can quibble over commas or split infinitives. But they do not know life.

ONE OF THE highest paid writers in America sends his stories to the editorial office, scribbled in phonetic English. A college graduate, who majored in English, rewrites his stuff. She draws $25 per week. He gets between $15,000 and $25,000 per year. Why?

He knows psychology and she knows only English. Let this be a lesson to those of you with literary desires. Study people. Grammar and spelling are relatively insignificant.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

By Wynn

For Tuesday, June 13. BACKGROUND vibrations quite strong and good today; but morning and early afternoon hold the elements of clashes for those who don't control themselves. Avoid self-sympathy; look at things with tomorrow and next month in view.

Our Problem. When nature demands, through astrologically understood vibrations, that men and women alter their attitudes and policies—that they improve their national and international selfishnesses—and that they do so quickly, it is also a call to make improvement. The world is now in such a period. It has been predicted by astrologers for years. It is a call for intelligent people making, not war.

Your Year Ahead. From this to next natal dates stresses hospitality, standing with neighbors and friends generally—more happiness if you know how to share, exchange. Danger: Dec. 16-27; and April 22-May 11, 1940.

Plastic Surgery Much Improved, Says Physician

Visits Clinic and Is Amazed at Results of Face-Lifting Operations.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

I HAVE been visiting a good many clinics lately, mostly in the eastern part of the country, and feel that some of the things I have seen will be of interest to my readers, so I will describe them.

One of the most astonishing was a clinic on plastic surgery for the repair of disfigured noses and other facial disfigurements. I saw patients, some of them before and after the operation, and the change was almost unbelievable. Large, hooked noses of hideous appearance are turned into straight Greek noses. Large, hypertrophied noses are made to conform to the proper proportions and angles of the face.

Plastic surgeons have learned that they must study their patients carefully before operations. This constitutes probably the greatest single advance in their work. They have learned to set up a standard of facial proportions and make careful measurements before the operation to see that the final result will conform to these ideal measurements. In no branch of surgery has more improvement been made by those who specialize in it.

I also saw some amazing results from face-lifting, in which sagging chins and flesh around the eyes were improved without leaving a single visible scar.

One of the important features of the work is the change in personality that occurs in the patients. A recent study of patients in the Graduate Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania showed that in almost all cases those with facial disfigurement had an emotional handicap that was directly dependent upon the disfigurement. This is quite natural, and reasons for facial repair were very practical, ranging all the way from a desire to get married to a desire to get a good job in both of which cases the facial disfigurement was a handicap.

One patient said she hated her mother and sisters because "they are so beautiful and do not realize what I go through."

With many of these cases for years the scar, harlequin or misshapen nose had been looked on as a handicap. Its importance in the social and emotional adjustment is unconsciously all embracing. It is the "hook" which the patient all the way from a desire to get married to a desire to get a good job in both of which cases the facial disfigurement was a handicap.

A LADY OF DETERMINATION

Hazel Hayes, Muncy Opera Soprano, Knows What She Wants and Gets It.

By Virginia Irwin

FOUND: An actress who refuses to accept role of a female Horatio Alger hero. Will be on exhibition 8:15 p. m. every night this week, June 12-18, at Municipal Theater in Forest Park, disguised as soprano prima donna of "Queen High."

The name, ladies and gentlemen, of this theatrical phenomenon is Hazel Hayes. Her hair is black and curly and her eyes are hazel and full of the devil. She has sung in opera and on the radio, been in the movies, and holds the distinction, to the best knowledge of this nosy newsman, of being the only actress, alive or otherwise, who refused to tell tales of starving in an attic all for the sake of her art.

In her suite at the Congress Hotel yesterday, Hazel treated her reporter to a bottle of beer and bared her past. There were no dramatics, no yarns woven around a struggle for success. The lady, it seems, always knew what she wanted, went after it and got it.

"I'm sorry," Helen apologized, "but I was never poor, never went hungry, and never had anything particularly unusual happen to me."

Considerably taken aback by the only celebrity ever unearthed who wouldn't croquet a little fancy fiction about herself, I stammered my way into that old now-Miss-Hayes-what-do-you-ascribe-your-success-to stuff.

"Determination," she replied, "and plenty of it."

And reviewing the Hayes career it looks like Hazel has the right formula. Born in La Crosse, Kansas, with a silver spoon in her mouth and a satin coverlet on her cradle, La Hayes was blessed with an indulgent daddy. When she wanted something Papa Hayes gave it to her and so Hazel grew up accustomed to getting what she wanted. She wanted to go to the University of Kansas and she went. She wanted a Bachelor of Science degree and she got that.

"I was so used to having my own way," Hazel explained, "that I thought I had to run everything. And I almost did—the sorority, the glee club, the theatrical activities. It was a lot of work, but I liked it."

FROM the university, Hazel went to a conservatory of music in Denver and with characteristic determination copped off a few scholarships, moved on to the Vermon Conservatory of Music and ran my legs off going here, there and the other place for lessons. Finally I made my debut in 'Aida' at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles. Then came symphony concerts and tours with a couple of opera companies. And then in 1934 I was picked from among 33 candidates as one of the 13 Wampas baby stars for that year.

After making two pictures, Hazel went on a personal appearance tour and then back into concert work. She made concert tours of Canada and South America and then signed with the Miami Symphony. Now she is making her debut at the Municipal Opera as Polly Nettleton in "Queen High." And besides her role in "Queen High," Hazel will have roles in three forthcoming productions. She will be Franziska Steingruber in "Waltz Dream," Gertrude Van Dure in "The Firefly" and Mary in "Mary."

"I've sung 'Die Gotterdammerung,' been a Wampas baby star and now I'm doing a comedy role in that there was no reason for going to Europe. If Thorner was good enough for Rosa Ponselle, he was good enough for me.

"Then I began to work in a big way. I studied under Thorner, took a French lesson daily from a teacher in Santa Monica, a daily German lesson and a daily Italian lesson from two other teachers. I nearly ran my legs off going here, there and the other place for lessons. Finally I made my debut in 'Aida' at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles. Then came symphony concerts and tours with a couple of opera companies. And then in 1934 I was picked from among 33 candidates as one of the 13 Wampas baby stars for that year.

"Queen High," Hazel laughed, marry, she should do a pretty good "What a combination. Looking back, my career has been a tremendous success. I wonder what else I'll be doing before I complete the assortment."

Hazel has never married. She's been too busy carving her career. And besides, her head rules her heart. A couple of times when a couple of likely chaps tried to talk her into marriage, Hazel has considered the matter, but she says, "by the time I got through thinking things through, the deal was off." Even though, Hazel intends to tackle matrimony.

"It's the same with marriage as with anything else in my career," she explained. "No matter what comes up, I've got to do my own thinking. Perhaps I think things through too much. Perhaps I've never had anything particularly unusual happen to me because I use my head. If I'd let my heart do the talking occasionally, I might make a more exciting story."

If and when Hazel Hayes does work to produce.

Cook-Cooks

By Ted Cook

Of all the sidelights on the King and Queen of England, and their ordeal by travel, the item that puzzles us most was the one explaining that a special steward travels with them to keep them from eating food they do not like, particularly kippered herring and corn-on-the-cob.

Do you suppose they're so numb from hearing speeches and pumping hands that they are likely to start on an ear of corn before they know it?

Does the special steward hover behind them and snatch the corn cob just in the nick of time?

Humble people, it seems to us, work out the problem of not eating what they do not like in a more comfortable manner.

When a waiter brings corn-on-the-cob, and we do not want it, we merely say: "Take it away," or: "Include us out."

If the occasion is formal, we wait for an opportune moment and wrap the corn cob in a napkin and tuck it in our inside pocket.

The King and Queen get what they want. Why can't they say: "Bring us a substitute for corn-on-the-cob?"

But, then, they'd probably get tapiooca.

A Husband Gets Sweet Revenge In Bridge Game

Turns Tables on Wife Who Had Previously Criticized His Play.

By Ely Culbertson

"DEAR Mr. Culbertson: You column recently carried a hand played by myself in partnership with my better half. You rather forcefully expressed your wife's side of the ensuing argument and I've been living in the well known doghouse ever since. The number of telephone calls and comments of friends, I am sure every person in Wisconsin reads your column.

"Perhaps you may assist me in opening the door of the doghouse by your comment on the following hand, which I had good fortune to play against my 'better half' in a rubber game. I was very fortunate to find the deal favorably and was most pleased that my good wife, at the moment, was behind the eight ball.

"I was South (North-South vulnerable) and reached the contract of six no trump. West opened heart ten and I won with the ace. The club jack was taken by East (my wife). A heart was returned which I will grant appears to be the best exit. Play of the club disclosed the bad break in clubs. Four spade tricks caused my embarrassment and, I might say, great pleasure to myself, in having discarded a heart on the fourth spade trick, was forced to lead to the heart king in the following hand. I decided to choose between discarding a diamond from the king-jack or discarding the club. She decided to discard a diamond. The queen was led, followed by the finesse in diamonds, which brought my ace then dropped the ace fulfilling a rather ambitious contract. "Gerald C. Maloney, Madison, Wis."

Well, there is one thing I will give Mr. Maloney, and that is he is a darned good sport! I give him a terrible raking-over-the coals for his play. Hereafter when Gerald C. Maloney . . . criticizes his bridge playing, he can just put up a copy of today's newspaper and smile, for today Ely Culbertson, his column, backs Mr. Maloney's bridge playing unqualifiedly against Mr. Maloney's. Obviously, Maloney has grinned and "said it," and now here's a little shine for him.

Mrs. Maloney (East) should have returned a heart after winning the trick with her club king. At this point she should have put her husband squarely on the spot by returning the diamond jack. The declarer would have to decide whether to take the diamond finesse or to play for a drop of ten of clubs (the nine already having appeared from West). It would be quite a dilemma for him and he could not be criticised for guessing wrong. East's heart return allowed declarer to decide on the diamond finesse. If sincerely trust this goes at least a short way toward equalizing matters between Mr. and Mrs. Maloney.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Martha Carr: I please offer my "two cents worth" in regard to the modern packing problem. I am 16 years old and considered a popular girl. I am active in a number of organizations and in sports. But, contrary to the belief that I have too many activities to give time to school, I am rated high in my senior studies and my male friends consider me "bright" also; bright enough, in fact, to know how to say "No" and yet keep them coming back again.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

The truth is, that at the time I first entered the "gay social whirl" of the younger set, I found soon enough the reputation that one little kiss can give a girl (and I'm going to admit that one or two for a flirtation are a heck a lot of fun); but it so happens that this fun, in our town, changes a girl's reputation.

The part I want to bring out is, that a girl can say "no" and still make the fellow think she is a grand girl whose whim it is their pleasure to serve. And my code has been confirmed by every one of my sorority sisters, who are busy now having the gayest times of their lives at the city's finest clubs, dances, hotels and the like. All I can say is, go to the most respected, popular girl you know and ask her about her views on "necking."

MODERN MISS.

Dear Mrs. Carr: FOR THE PAST two years I have boarded with a friend of my mother's, but I am afraid I will have to leave, because I noticed last week that the bed is alive with bedbugs. Mrs. Carr, is there anything I can do to get rid of these things without hurting the woman's feelings?

WORRIED.

You can, of course, buy a small bottle of corrosive sublimate and apply it to the bed frame, mattress and pillows. But these pests are hard to get rid of and the right thing is to have the bed and bedding taken out of doors, the carpet up and the room cleaned and washed, with this remedy applied even to the cracks in the baseboard and floor. Your friend may have none in any other part of the house and she might be very glad to know about the trouble, so that they would not reach other rooms in the house. Why should these bugs be more embarrassing than other pests? There was once a time when their presence was indication of unclean housekeeping and slovenly living; but other nuisances of the insect world, I think, are now regarded with just as much abhorrence.

Dear Mrs. Carr: I AM A GIRL 15 years old. Though I am not in love I am not experienced enough to understand a 17-year-old boy whom I like very much. For years there has been a bunch of girls and boys at our house every evening. He has been among them the last year. I have never had a date with him, because I haven't started dating boys. He has always been well-mannered, but all of a sudden, though he has been coming to our house, he doesn't speak to me. I am wondering if some of the others could have said something to him. But it does seem unfair for him to be angry and not to let me know the reasons; I am unhappy about it and he seems puzzled as well as me.

JUST A PUZZLED GIRL.

If the boy comes to your home and offers no greeting at all, he could hardly be called well-mannered. Even if someone has been gossiping and making mischief, this does not excuse his rudeness. His best course would be to remain away from your house and stop putting.

It is possible, of course, that there are mischief makers in your crowd, as elsewhere, but I should pay as little attention to his attitude as possible; be polite and agreeable as long as he is in your home and just polite, but making no effort, when seeing him elsewhere.

THANK YOU.

Dear Mrs. Carr: OUR HOUSE is rather close to that of our neighbors' and my problem is the noise that these people make at night, when we are in bed. They invariably drive in and out the driveway, talking loudly and allow the little girl to laugh and talk loudly.

I certainly would appreciate it if you would tell me just how to handle the situation, for this condition must be eliminated or our night's rest and peace of mind will be sadly disturbed.

THANK YOU.

This is an old, and a perplexing question. The condition is complicated if these people own their property next to yours; and, of course, the trouble is doubled if they happen to be persons inconsiderate of others. If you have the same landlord, you might speak to him about it and possibly he would be willing to give a hint that some of your family were not exactly well and are obliged to have quiet at night.

You know these people and, of course, can judge whether they might be approachable if you wish, to ask them quietly if they would mind making just a little less noise when it is very late. You can apologize for mentioning it saying that you hesitated to do, but thought perhaps they were just fine sleepers and did not realize how the sounds carry there.

place of cocktails. Do you think this suggestion is good, or not?

Answer: Since the object of serving cold bouillon before a meal is to give those who do not like alcoholic cocktails an alternate choice, if I were you I would not serve anything before the meal. It is entirely proper and not at all unusual that no cocktails be passed, particularly before lunch, but if you are uncertain as to what to do, then have many tomato juice cocktails and perhaps a few glasses of sherry brought in on a tray.

Dear Mrs. Carr: All my life I have known the man who is now Mayor of our city. I have naturally always called him by first name. But what now? When he and his wife come to a dinner, let's say, at our house, how is he presented (1) to strangers (2) to others of our best friends who have never met him? (3) When speaking to him before others, what shall I call him?

Answer: (1) and (2) You introduce him as "Mayor Lake." You would say "His Honor, the Mayor" only if you were presenting him publicly—as a speaker, for example. (3) The only time you speak to him by first name is when you and your family are alone or with intimate friends. On most occasions you can say "you" and avoid the use of any name about which you are not certain.

What are we to do with him? I asked Mother tearfully. "I never dreamed he would behave like this."

What are we to do with him? I asked Mother tearfully. "I never dreamed he would behave like this."

THE DEATH THAT LURKED IN THE SKY

How Five German Planes During World War Nearly Sank British Submarine Before Help Arrived

By Lieut.-Commander Kenneth Edwards, R. N., Retired

This is the second of a series of articles from the book, "We Dive at Dawn," by Lieutenant-Commander Edwards.

THE German seaplanes in the Heligoland Bight were a constant source of anxiety to the British submarines, particularly when they adopted the technique of diving down silently, with engines shut off, and opening fire with machine guns as they switched on their engines at a range of less than 200 yards.

E-4 was caught by a seaplane off Horn's Reef in 1916, and it was only the impudence and presence of mind of her commander, Lieutenant-Commander Tension, who saved the submarine. E-4 had just surfaced for navigational observations when Tension, who had climbed on to the bridge, heard the seaplane's engine switched on. The seaplane was only 200 yards away, and there was no time to get E-4 under water before the bombs would be dropped. Tension bent down and pressed the button of the diving-hooters. Then he stood up and waved enthusiastically to the pilot of the seaplane. The seaplane shot past at a few yards range, the pilot staying his hand on the bomb release and replying to Tension's wave. For a fraction of a second he must have thought that he had been on the verge of sinking one of his own submarines. It does not take long to get a seaplane to turn, but E-4 was already diving. Tension jumped down the conning-tower and slammed the hatch. E-4 was at 18 feet when three bombs burst over the fore part of her hull.

Actually only two British submarines were sunk by air bombs during the war, and one of these was E-10, which was sunk, lying in British harbor, C-25, however, was very nearly sunk by German seaplanes when she was patrolling off Harwich on July 6, 1918. Five enemy seaplanes were returning from a daylight raid on Lowestoft, and from the direction in which they were flying, it seemed that they were friends, like a bloody shambling, C-25 was towed into port.

By 1916 a new method of submarine warfare had taken possession of the Heligoland Bight. Gone were the days when British submarines roamed about inside the enemy patrols and mine fields, on the lookout always for a chance to ram a torpedo boat or an enemy hull. The word had gone forth that the submarines must be content with keeping a watching patrol in a great ring round the Heligoland Bight. They were to report any enemy forces leaving the Bight, but were not to attack. The enemy was only to be attacked if sighted on his way home. In other words, the main forces of the British Navy wanted the targets for themselves. Naturally enough, the idea did not appeal very strongly to the British "submariners." They felt that if they were sufficiently enterprising to go and seek the enemy in his bolt holes, they should have the opportunity of attacking him whenever he gave them the chance. Nevertheless, they were quick to see that the orders were sound enough. If the German High Sea Fleet did put to sea, the object must be to try to force a fleet action on the enemy, not to frighten him back to harbor before the Grand Fleet had had a chance.

The realization did not make the submarine watching patrols any less boring. When the submarines had been allowed to ro hunting on their own account, there was excitement to temper the discomfort of submarine patrol work overseas, but mere boredom and discomfort made life seem well-nigh unbearable.

It became unbearable to Lieut. Varley on July 11, 1916. For days Varley in H-5 had been patrolling off Terschelling. He had seen nothing but the heaving gray waves of the North Sea, and had come to the conclusion that he certainly was not helping to win the war by staying where he was. He decided to leave his patrol area and go and see what was happening in the German harbors. Varley was asking for trouble in two senses. The German harbors and their approaches were unhealthy, and he was leaving his patrol area in direct disobedience of orders. But Varley was young and keen, and Nelson had won a victory by disobeying orders. The orders that H-5 was to patrol an area in which nothing was ever seen struck Varley as the height of futility.

So, on July 11, 1916, Varley fixed H-5's position by the Terschelling Light in order to get a good point of departure, and set out to look for trouble. At 2 a. m. next morning H-5 was off Borkum. There she dove and patrolled at periscope depth. In the evening she surfaced to charge her batteries, but at 10:25 p. m. this operation was interrupted, and H-5 dived hurriedly to avoid a destroyer.

Being forced to crash dive when charging batteries was a commonplace in submarines in war-time. In H-5, however, complications had set in. While diving off Borkum during the day, the periscope had become very stiff to turn. Nor could it be fully lowered, so that it would prove a trap for a sweep if the submarine were hunted. When H-5 had come to the surface after dark, Varley and his "outside" engine-room artificer had found that the trouble with the periscope was located in the center bush of the periscope standard. They were trying to put things right when the destroyer appeared. It was all they could do to get down the conning-tower hatch themselves before H-5 dived beneath them. There certainly was no time to gather up the tools. Consequently all the tools were lost, and also some parts of the center bush of the periscope guide. This left the periscope in rather worse case than before, and now there was no possibility of setting it to rights. Yet H-5 continued eastward. During once made up his mind to disobey orders and leave that boring patrol position, it would have taken more than a very stiff periscope to persuade Varley to return to it.

Having done the damage, the destroyer passed on without seeing H-5. Varley brought his submarine to the surface again and continued charging her batteries. Almost immediately he sighted another German patrol-vessel, but he was able to work round her without being seen and did not have to dive. His eyes on H-5's tiny bridge were certainly very sharp.

Y 1 a. m. on July 13 H-5 was in sight of the Wangerog and Rote Land lights. There Varley dived, and went on submerged towards the Ausen Jade lightship. There three lights were the "lamp-posts" at the very entrance to the principal harbor of the German Fleet. At 9:58 p. m. that night Varley sighted a destroyer two miles northwest of the Ausen Jade lightship. This was obviously a sort of guardship at the harbor entrance.

It was a fairly light night, and H-5 was keeping a very sharp lookout indeed, as behooves those who creep into enemy harbors in war-time. So, when a whole flotilla of German destroyers of the "G-101" class appeared at 24 minutes past midnight, H-5 dived at once without being seen by them. Varley, although handicapped by the difficulty in turning his periscope, attacked the enemy destroyers, but without success.

H-5, however, stayed where she was. Varley argued that he would not have to wait long for another chance if he remained in the very entrance to the enemy's base. He

Submarine Mice

"IN the early days, submarines carried little cages of white mice. White mice are more sensitive to asphyxiation than human beings, and the idea was to use them as indicators of danger. If the mice 'turned their toes up,' it meant it was time to do something drastic about getting some fresh air into the submarine. But the white mice were never a big success. The 'submariners' made great pets of them, and they were habitually kept carefully away from fumes. On more than one occasion a submarine's white mice were given away to friends ashore in order to provide them with happier and more comfortable homes. As every mouse had to be officially accounted for to the naval stores authorities, it is probable that the official figures of mouse-mortality were very much exaggerated."

waves of the North Sea, and had come to the conclusion that he certainly was not helping to win the war by staying where he was. ## A Test of Nerves

"THE submarine E-9 (Lieutenant-Commander Horton) had carried her search for information and prey to the point of poking her nose into the very harbor of Heligoland. But there was nobody at home there. Germany had withdrawn her high sea fleet behind the shelter of the sandbanks and the mine fields guarding the entrances to the Elms and the Jade, and Heligoland was being used only as an advanced base for patrol craft. E-9 went to the bottom to snatch some rest, and the officers settled down to play bridge. During that rubber of bridge German sweep-wires scraped over them. The first lieutenant seemed to be losing his grip on the game through listening to the chains and wires as they scraped along the hull and wondering whether they were explosive sweeps, but Horton dragged his mind back to the game with a curt "Your play, Chapman." The hand came to an end just as the sweeps dragged clear and the first lieutenant claimed that his captain was down one trick doubled. Horton laughed shortly. "Not a bit of it. You revoked when the wire fouled us. You forfeit two tricks. Bridge, gentlemen, is a game you see, simply got to keep your mind on it if you ever hope to play it well."

The Admiralty, however, felt that an example must be made. If they forgot Varley's disobedience and gave him the reward which he had earned by sinking a German submarine, might it not encourage other zealous submarine officers to abandon their patrol positions for a little free-lance roving? For a year Varley stood as an example. Then the Admiralty relented and awarded him the decoration which he so richly deserved.

Little Imitator

CHARLIE is four years old, the only child in a family of five adults. This spring he started to play with other children his own age outside his own yard. All went well for a time and then he began showing new accomplishments. He galvanized his aunt by shouting at her, "You can't ride me, go fish," when she told him it was time to go upstairs to wash himself for dinner. He angered his grandfather by saying, very loudly and with great swagger, "Who you think you're talking to? Think you're Mussolini, don't you?" He sent his mother into hysterics by telling her, "I'll eat what I please. You can't make me do nothing."

The shocked family held a conference. "He must have learned that from somebody he plays with. Did you see him spread his legs and swagger? Did you see him squint his eyes and twist his mouth? He's been with some youngster who is tough enough to chew nails."

"What are

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

JOAN didn't notice. She said almost instantly: "But what about you, Peg? You don't look quite so starry eyed and happy as you did before I went away. And you're much, much too thin. Why did you leave Mr. Nelson's office? And what about Hewitt and how come no ring on that finger and all the gossip about you and Paul Stranyan?"

"It's quite the everyday conversation that Count Stranyan, madly in love with one Peg Patterson of Richmond and Washington. That you two are being seen every day on rather magnificent mounts, winding your way over the bridge paths in Rock Creek Park. And that you two cocktail and dance and dine and see shows together. He looked like rather a dangerous killeroo to me and he certainly had one of those pasts that makes a gal gasp—that is, if there's an atom of truth in what people say."

Peg said: "Must we talk about me, really?"

"Not unless you want to, Peg. I thought perhaps you did."

"I don't," said Peg. "But I'll answer your questions. Hewitt and I were married. The wedding is definitely off. I am seeing a lot of Paul. He isn't in the least dangerous. I left Mr. Nelson's because I didn't want to be working in the same office with Hewitt—and in a way for him since he's a partner now—under the circumstances. I hired a typewriter at one of the companies here, sent it over to the civil service examinations and, believe it or not, passed as a typist and got me a job of work at $1000 per year! Thirty days sick leave. Thirty days annual. It's not too bad."

But even as she said these things in a casual unimpassioned voice, she hated the pride that kept her from telling the truth to Joan. She did want to talk about herself.

She wanted to ease the weight of her thoughts by confessing that living in the same world with Anthony was, in a way, torture. That she lay awake nights thinking about him, wondering, being hopelessly miserable because she loved him and she would never love any one else as long as she lived.

She wanted to tell Joan that Hewitt was making things very difficult for her these days. Hewitt, who had never drunk a great deal, was drinking heavily now. That when he was completely drunk he always found his way to Aunt Mehalie's, forced his way in and made a scene.

Just as he had made one unforgettable horrible scene that night at a club when he had staggered in alone and had found her at a table with Paul Stranyan. There had been the humiliating business after that of the fight, of Hewitt climbing up from the floor, holding his jaw where Paul's fist had landed; of the orchestra playing a jam number faster than swing and seven times louder than it should have been, and of waiters running in a panic to put to half drag Hewitt down the wide marble stairs and out into the street.

She wanted to tell Joan she had almost made up her mind to marry Paul. Simply because he did love her so much and because, in a way, he needed her. With an incentive, with the roots of his life firmly imbedded in a happy marriage, Paul had a brilliant career ahead of him in the diplomatic service. His Ambassador believed this, too, and had said so. Not in so many words, but with a twinkle in his dark eyes he had told her that his country was one that did not forbid the marriage of its attaches to foreign women.

SHE wanted to explain to Joan that Paul had always had too much money, the glamour of a title and a certain recklessness of blood that had appealed to women—married and single—and therefore had been his undoing in the past.

She wanted to tell Joan everything about last night when she and Paul had gone out on the porch at the Chevy Chase Club and had stood there looking at the rain that was like myriad tiny spears boring into the grass.

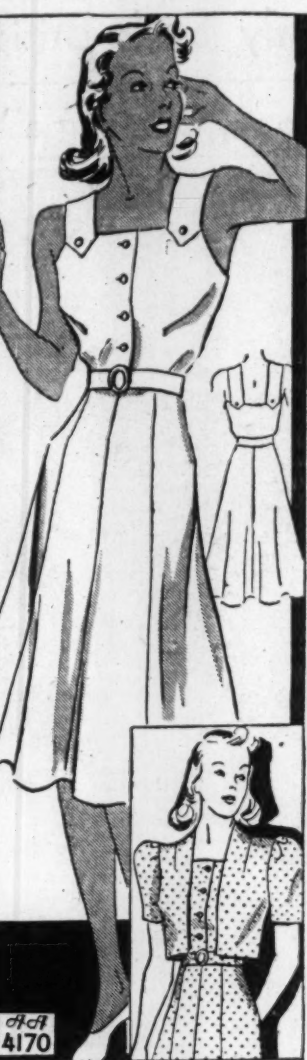

She had told Paul, frankly, "I can't play at love with you, Paul. And, even if I could, I doubt if you could take it. If I married you, you would know always that there was someone else who meant more to me than you..."

Paul had understood. "But, Peg, maybe after a while..." a very long while...

And she had said, quickly: "It wouldn't be good enough, Paul. It wouldn't be anywhere near good enough for you. And it might be a ghastly mistake. For us both."

"But I'm willing to chance it, Peg. I'm willing to wait for you to love me... or even to be satisfied with your liking me best of everyone."

They had left it at that, nothing settled. But Peg told herself now: "Why not?" For Paul could bring beauty to her life, ease and comfort and companionship. She couldn't go on breaking her heart like this for the sight of a pair of gray eyes and sandy hair that curled just a little and a long, slim body.

She thought: "I do like Paul. I like him better than any man I know. And I could make him happy. I could be a little happy myself and never completely lonely again. Why lose all happiness because the very best is gone. I could spend the rest of my life being grateful to Paul because he had saved me from loneliness. And gratitude is very kin to love."

Yes, she wanted to tell Joan all this. But always she had had a healthy contempt for people who dragged their personal problems out into the open, who shoved their indecisions off on some one else's shoulder. So she told Joan none of this.

Joan looked at Peg now and saw that there wasn't any glow in her eyes or on her lips. All the light seemed to have left her except the crowning brightness of her hair as it curled about her slender face. She believed firmly that Peg was grieving for Hewitt. That all the gossip she had heard about Hewitt and Thalia when Hewitt had been vacationing in Florida must have been perfectly true. That was why Paul had broken the engagement. She couldn't look at Peg without realizing that something precious and vital had gone out of her.

SHE said then, very quickly: "Peg, everything will come out all right. It has to. It wouldn't be a decent world at all if it did horrible things to you. I don't believe I'd want any part of it if it did." In less than 24 hours Peg would look back on Joan having said this and she would wonder, dully, if Joan had had a present warning of impending tragedy.

And then Joan was saying, because she wanted awfully to change the subject, and Anthony was certainly a safe enough one:

"Look, Peg, in Anthony's last letter he sent me this..." she dug in her purse and brought out a snapshot; a snapshot of a very tall young man standing in the Tuilleries with Napoleon's stallions like silhouettes in bronze against the Paris sky. A girl hung on his arm. A possessive young girl with fair hair and a lovely, radiant face tilted up so that her eyes might meet his.

Joan said, handing it over to Peg: "It's grand of Anthony, isn't it? It makes me so homesick for him. Pretty good of Evangeline, too. But you never met Evangeline, did you, darling?" And then, all at once, Joan was completely silent, hardly breathing, staring at Peg.

It was, she thought, like looking at a naked soul. In that moment Peg was unconscious of her presence, perhaps of her very existence. Her head was bent a little, the eyes were turned downward so that her lashes lay like fans on her pale cheeks.

The sensitive lips were pressed together firmly, but not enough to withhold a slight quiver.

Sharply Joan remembered a child she had seen years ago, crying bitterly, terribly, without making a sound. For one instant the little had been quite surprised to read of Anthony's engagement to Evangeline. But she knew that Anthony would never have gotten himself engaged to Evangeline Martin if he hadn't been in love with her to the exclusion of everything—and of every one—else.
